HER DAY of WORK and PLAY

by AMY ABBOTT

Making Dishwashing Easy.
Some women like to cook, others like to dust, and there are even those who don't complain about scrubbing, but we have yet to meet a person who doesn't thoroughly dislike washing the dishes. As winter comes on, and the cooking dishes are more numerous and harder to wash, every woman is interested in how dishwashing may be made easier.

From the viewpoint of the housewife, dishwashing is not a single process, but a series of movements which are known as "doing the dishes." The different motions which are generally to be gone through in dishwashing are: First, scraping waste from the dishes about to be washed. Second, stacking or arranging dishes on sink preparatory to washing.

Third, actual washing with soap, water, cloth, or other cleanser. Fourth, washing with clear water. Fifth, drying dishes with towel. Sixth, putting them away in cupboard. The way to lessen the time and effort expended in this most commonplace of household tasks is to take the dishwashing step by step and simplify it.

For instance, beginning with the scraping process, a blunt wooden paddle or rubber scraper will thoroughly and noiselessly remove the food. In order to improve the stacking into a surface or table of sufficient size to the right of the sink and arrange dishes according to size and shape. They can then be easily picked up according to size and be washed faster. An excellent way in which to rinse dishes is to attach a bath hose or sprinker to the hot-water faucet and spray the dishes as they stand upright in the drainer to the left. If this is done with clear scalding water there is really no need for wiping the dishes. This is particularly important as a time saver because it has been proven that it takes longer to wipe dishes than it does to wash them.

One of the most important things to remember in washing dishes is that a few moments soak in tepid water is often worth a great deal of actual scouring.

In the well-planned house the dishes may be laid directly from the drain to the storage shelves along the kitchen wall. To return to the actual washing, experiments with hand washing have proven that there is not much that can be done in the actual washing which will reduce time and effort. But in order to make the work more agreeable the sink basin should be high enough so that the worker never bends over, the sink basin itself should be deep enough to avoid splashing over, the temperature of the water should be hot enough to cut the grease, and a soap in solid form should never be used. Unfortunately even the most improved mechanical dish washer cannot be recommended since our houses and plumbing are not adapted to the power dishwashing machine.

The Basis of Beauty.
It is not an easy thing to be a modern American Venus and the title is only maintained at the cost of much time and effort. Beauty must be more than skin deep, says Miss Mahels Lee, newly elected president of the national society of women directors of physical education in colleges and universities. The American Venus must train as constantly as a prize fighter, although not vigorously, says Miss Lee. She must develop an over-all beauty, and this grace and strength are acquired by doing specially designed exercises.

The Christmas Pudding.
England is busy making the traditional Christmas pudding. Some of our plum puddings come from England, and Francis Latry, chef of the Savoy restaurant in London has already made 2,000 pounds of plum pudding for consumption in the United States.

"Mix your puddings several weeks in advance," is his advice to the woman who makes her own. Here is his recipe for a seven-pound English plum pudding:
Ingredients: Twelve ounces Malaga raisins, twelve ounces currants, twelve ounces sult, nine ounces of flour, four ounces chopped apple, one ounce orange peel, eight ounces brown sugar, one-half pint milk, twelve ounces Snyrna raisins, twelve ounces crystallized peel, ten ounces bread crumbs, one ounce ginger, one ounce citron peel, one teaspoon salt, six eggs, one-fourth pint of brandy or sherry.

All the dry ingredients should be well mixed together. A little extra mixing well repays the trouble. Beat the eggs and add them to the milk, then pour over the dry ingredients, and again mix thoroughly. Pack into greased molds and boil for six hours at the time of making. The puddings should be boiled for a further six hours when wanted for use.

The best sauces, he says, are white, custard or brandy sauce.

HAVE ANNIVERSARY

CRESTLINE, O., Nov. 16.—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McMahon, recently celebrated their fifty-sixth wedding anniversary.

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"
Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly. For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drug store. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

TRAIN KILLS BOY

HAMILTON, O., Nov. 16.—Florian Belcher, 11, was dead here today from injuries received when he was said to have been struck and dragged by a C. & I. and W. freight train near this city yesterday. The youth had been gathering hickory nuts and, according to a coroner's investigation, his foot became caught in a switch.

THIS WAS HORSE ON BUTLER

URBANA, Nov. 16.—Fuller Butler, clerk in a drug store here, is willing to take a man at his word after this.
A customer accosted him and asked for a remedy for his horse which contains alcohol and which in this age of prohibition, 'tis said, is used as a drink by many. Butler suspected the customer didn't want it for his horse.
"Bring the horse in here and I'll give him a dose but I can't sell you the bottle," the clerk said.
"Two minutes later when the customer tried to get the horse through the front door of the store, Butler got 'cold feet' and admitted his error.

FALLS 1,000 FEET TO TAKE MOVIE

JIMMY CLARK WITH MOTION PICTURE CAMERA STRAPPED TO HIS CHEST

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1926
WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Jimmy Clark fell 2,000 feet to expose a roll of film.
Jimmy Clark is ace parachute-jumper of the naval aviation corps. Falling out of planes is all in the day's work to him.
When it was desired to get a motion picture of a parachute descent as it looks to the jumper, Jimmy was consulted. "Sure," was his answer.
From a plane flying high over the local naval airport, Jimmy tested his parachute, then slid off the wing into space. At the same moment an automatic motion picture camera strapped to his chest began to grind.
The "voyage" was no different from many others to Clark. He landed safely.
The resultant film, one of the most unusual ever made, is expected to be valuable in parachute-jumping instruction work.

RABBIT HUNTERS IN ANNUAL EXODUS

Despite the outbreak of hog cholera in Greene County the number of hunting licenses issued by Clerk of Courts, Harvey Elam, when the rabbit season opened

November 15, showed an increase of eighteen over 1925. Seemingly undisturbed by the epidemic, 350 nimrods took to the fields under trying weather conditions Monday armed with hunting licenses and high hopes for good luck.
The number of licenses disposed of so far is about the average. Statistics compiled by Mr. Elam show that by November 15, 350 licenses were issued this year, 332 in 1925, 372 in 1924, 292 in 1923 and 279 in 1922.

P.T.A. LUNCHEON

FOLLOWED BY MEETING

Through the capable forethought of Mrs. Charles Adair, president, members of Central High Parent-Teacher Association, eighty in number enjoyed luncheon at the Elks' Club, Monday and an interesting program later at the school. The pleasant luncheon was followed by a visit to the Opportunity School and an address by Miss Marjorie Gilbert, Dayton. Mrs. Adair was unable to attend the meeting and her place was filled by Mrs. E. P. Hamlin. Mrs. Charles Kinsey was program chairman.

Miss Gilbert is connected with the Dayton Branch of the Bureau of Special Education, Miami University and she confined her talk to the significance of Opportunity School work. She outlined the various "opportunities" of the backward child, pointing out the value of individual instruction, special teaching, class room material, free activity, individual expression and happiness in success. She said the backward pupils obtained a taste of success by being segregated from quicker pupils and showed more energy and contentment in their vocational opportunities and instruction in making a livelihood. "Xenia should feel justly proud of its Opportunity School," she said.

Miss Alice Neff, of Central faculty, reported the state P.T.A. convention at Marietta, and brought home the message to observe Friday 17 as the "birth day" of the P.T.A. organization, from 1897.

Mrs. Adair sent word to the organization, urging everyone to attend the Xenia-Wilmington football game Friday. Announcement was made of the district convention at Oakwood School, Dayton, January 21. Support of the organization in the union meeting of churches at Central High, next Sunday night at 7:15, when Dr. W. C. Klippinger, president of Oberlin College, will speak, was also urged.

Central P. T. A. now boasts 202 members.

Now we are never without Syrup Pepsin in the house." (Name and address furnished upon request.)

DECLINE OF FATHER

One of those professional authorities on boyhood who, as a rule, have never had a son of their own, observes that fathers play "too darn much golf" and pay too little attention to their sons.

"Tis true, 'tis pity, and pity 'tis 'tis true," but 'tis greater pity that the warning comes a bit too late. If the situation were the outcome merely of parental indifference, there might be some hope of recalling fathers to their traditional duties. An appeal to natural affection might suffice. But indifference plays only a minor part in the estrangement of fathers and sons.

Fathers have been driven to "too darn much golf" and to too little attention to their progeny by a sense of futility. Little by little they have been crowded out of their place of influence and authority by the overreaching of "experts" and "organizations" which let it be known that they, better than fathers, know the needs of youth.

Fathers have found that their best intentions were all wrong. They can not keep pace with the fads and fancies in child psychology and child training. Boyhood is the training school for future fathers, but the modern father has discovered that since he was a boy everything relating to the upbringing of a boy has been changed, even the method of discipline and of teaching the three R's.

So fathers shrug their shoulders in bewilderment and, in resignation, slink off to the links.

WHAT OF THE FUTURE?

Is the day for the modern exposition gone? Have the people of the country tired of them to such an extent that they are seeking for other pleasures and other sights?

The fate which seems to have been visited on the Sesqui-centennial at Philadelphia would seem to indicate that such is the case.

An eastern writer, commenting on the failure of the Philadelphia exposition has this comment to make—not only concerning it but the fact as well that Chicago plans for one on a bigger scale than ever, in 1933:

The Philadelphia Sesqui-centennial Exposition has failed. People simply wouldn't go. There were, besides the mid-way, the numerous exhibits of modern industry, places and The things closely woven with our fight for liberty as attractions. But the people did not go.

Is the sun setting on events of this kind? Are people bored with going miles and miles to see exhibits, and to walk on midways?

Chicago evidently doesn't believe so. A Chicago world's fair in 1933 will be greater in scale than anything ever attempted, according to the early ballyhoo from the Windy City.

The day of stupendous fairs may be past, but Chicago doesn't believe it.

POWER OF WILL

Doctors give "the will to live" as one of the strongest opponents of death.

When the mind accepts death as a foregone conclusion and surrenders, the fight against disease is almost hopelessly handicapped.

Lord Byron, in his youth, was told by a fortune-teller that he would die in his thirty-seventh year. The idea haunted him, and when he became ill after his thirty-seventh birthday anniversary he remembered the prophecy and, prompted by his superstitious belief in sooth-saying, said he was destined to die in that year. He died that year, but the conviction that his time to die had not yet arrived might have helped him get well.

A centenarian in an eastern town recently predicted that he would die on a certain day and at a certain hour. He died suddenly a half hour before the appointed hour. Doctors believe the strain of waiting for the end was too great for the aged man's heart and that he might have lived several years longer had his imagination not exposed his heart to the fatal trial.

"OUR FRIEND LAZARUS"

What is sleep called mystery? Science teaches that the normal mind from the cradle to the grave is never absolutely at rest. Mysterious vibrations, lightning-like in rapidity, and called by men "thought," persist without cessation.

But because this tide seems more or less to vanish, in sleep, although other bodily functions, such as the circulation of the blood, action of the heart and lungs, continue their unending work, there is a gap between voluntary and involuntary processes associated without waking and our dreamland life.

So much for the mystery of sleep. But that is only the beginning of the strange and puzzling story. The marvelous similarity between sleep and death has been commented upon by every human being since time began the unending legends of unnumbered centuries, back to the Dawn.

Do we, then, die each night, when we fall asleep? And if we do, then in what land do we linger, what unknown spaces do we cross?

"In dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falls upon men, in slumberings upon the bed:

Then he openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction

That He may withdraw man from his purpose, and hide pride from man.

These things said He; and after that He said unto them, Our Friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I will go, that I may awake him out of sleep."

Till time shall be no more, man will continue to muse on the strange dualism between the material and the spiritual. One day, all will no doubt be made clear, as our years roll on, but in the present state of man's knowledge, you must die to learn the ultimate truth.

Must it remain that way, always?

OUR SHAME-FACED PURSUIT OF BEAUTY

A farmer was telling me yesterday of an amazing discovery he had just made.

"I have a chance to sell my hilltop with growth oak and maple for more'n I would have asked for the cleared land," he said, chuckling. "City man wants it. Says he knows he can't raise anything on it, but thinks it's pretty. Just imagine getting more for worthless land than for good Fred C. Kelly land."

He drove away, still laughing over the joke on the city man, totally unable to comprehend that beauty itself is valuable.

This old chap doubtless feels pride in being hard-headed and practical. Yet he hadn't been practical enough to see that his farm was valuable in proportion to its beauty. He had worked like a slave to clear off woodland that would have brought him more money if let alone. What could be more practical than to know how to make more money by less work?

Evidently there is widespread acceptance of this fallacy that beauty is impractical. The truth is that beauty is the most practical thing with which we have to deal. Without it the world would be fit to live in. Then nothing would be worth doing.

Many think that if beauty isn't wholly impractical, it is at least affirmative—something that concerns only women and children.

Even those men who have enough intelligence to appreciate the gay colors of a vase of flowers on one's desk are often half-shame-faced about it.

Yet the craving for beauty does assert itself. A few men buy bright-hued neckties; others pursue beauty but dumb girls.

A lecturer on art subjects gave a talk before a group of business men. At the close of the speech, a local banker buttonholed him and said:

"I agree with all that you say about beauty, but we're too busy here building industries to have time for beauty. We are practical men."

"Yet," the lecturer quietly told him, "you are secretly seeking beauty all the while. You think you haven't time for it and yet you want it. Anyhow, you want what you think is beauty. Otherwise, why did you dye your whiskers?"

There were but two sessions of court held at Peter Borden's place. Afterward Xenia was made the county seat, having to contend for it with a little town called Pinkney, that had sprung up near the present site of Trebrens with the hope of being made the county seat. There is not one timber left upon another in this once pretentious little town. One historian saw it when there were some three or four buildings standing, although they were then roofless, windowless and, of course, tenantless, the lonely and decaying monument to disappointed ambition.

The DAYBOOK of a NEW YORKER

By BURTON RASCOE

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1925 NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Benson, the 12-year-old intellectual prodigy, who attained the highest quotient in official intelligence tests ever recorded in American educational annals, has the sort of courage of her convictions that would help a lot if it were more general in New York just now. A dreadful inertia has settled upon all of the reviewers for the literary supplements and weeklies, largely because, I think, of the present tendency to be kind, effeminate and innocuous.

Elizabeth has some of these pertinent things to say in "Vanity Fair."

"There seems to be a dearth of genius in America. There is much talent—for we have Fannie Hurst, Edna Ferber, Margaret Wilson,

SIDELIGHTS

ON Greene County History

HISTORY IS SILENT

As has been previously recorded, the first court held in Greene County was in a log cabin occupied by Peter Borden for a tavern, situated near what is now Harbison's Station. The court was composed of Francis Dunlavey, president; William Maxwell, Benjamin Whitman and James Barrett, associate judges.

At the meeting of this court Peter Borden obtained license to keep tavern, as it was then called, but he meant to sell whiskey and did it in the same room where court was held. Thus the first court room was the first whiskey saloon in Greene County.

History says this term of court was in session three days, records showing that about all the business transacted was the licensing of Peter Borden, Archibald Lowry and Griffith Foose to keep tavern, the former paying $4 for the privilege. It is recalled that the court and the liquor got mixed up and that there was a general melee in which all hands participated in the old-fashioned way. This may explain why there were but three days' session, a point in which history is silent.

Carl Van Vechten, Theodore Dreiser, Sinclair Lewis, Leonard Cline, Ruth Suckner, Sherwood Anderson and innumerable others who are either unconsciously in earnest and conscientious, bowed down under noble missions and fantastic realism, or bent on "entertaining us with their pretty gifts of words and characterizations. But there seems to me to be no master among them all, unless it be James Branch Cabell, who is the lone wolf of American letters, the Rabelais of Virginia, driven to expatriate himself in his shelf of whimsical books, and creating an absurd, delightful, Freudian-free country of his own imagination."

"Ben Hecht can describe emotions and mental processes with more brevity and brilliance than any other American author, but he can conceive of few emotions and few mental processes not intimately connected with deduction."

"The Michael Arlen shelf of books, produced with amazing rapidity, plainly betrays a middle-class viewpoint, the viewpoint of the devoted sycophant of the fantastic world which he imagines exists on the other side of closed doors. Of course, I know nothing from personal experience of English society—Mr. Arlen's beloved Mayfair—but I have a hunch that the real lords and ladies are truly amazed at their portraits and wish they could talk only half as brilliantly as Mr. Arlen makes them converse on this cream-tinted, deckle-edge pages."

"The Habbitts of America are rather like the pathetic nouveaux riches of society. Babbitt knows because Mencken and Lewis and their kind have told him so that all he has considered cultural and worthwhile and beautiful is uncultural, crude and ugly, but he does not know what constitutes good taste, culture and beauty or where he can find it. Maybe he once looked to New York as a Mecca for provincial Americans, but then along came Dos Passos' bitter and lengthy and incoherent Manhattan Transfer, proving New York to be as Main Street as Babbitt's own home town."

It is a relief to learn that the girl of this brilliant 12-year-old girl was ever burdened with the insipid stuff that usually goes under the name of "children's books." At nine she had read all of Shakespeare, Dickens, Scott and Thackeray.

"Pewee Meyers, the Boy with the Educated Feet," I read on the bill in front of a vaudeville house, and I went in and waited for Pewee to appear, for I wanted to see if it was the same Pewee Meyers I knew fifteen years ago. It was. He came on and did a very expert and comical turn "in one." He was getting over big, in "big time." Hence this I-knew-him-when story.

Fifteen years ago or maybe longer, Pewee was a ragged little street gam, who used to pick up a few pennies clogging for men around the fire station in Shawnee, Okla. He got the name of Pewee because he was such a small little runt. A tall, homeless, shambling negro boy had taught Pewee how to dance and at street fairs and carnivals and on circus days when people are in a holiday mood and like to be free with their money, Pewee and the grinning, happy-go-lucky negro used to make quite a bit of money. They both could dance awfully well, but they held their casual audience largely because of the grotesque character of their partnership—the little white kid and the lanky negro.

Then something happened to the negro. Anyhow, he disappeared from Shawnee and then the fellow who ran the Palace moving picture show decided he would hire Pewee to come on and dance while they were changing reels. He got to be very popular in the town and later on he got some billings at Oklahoma City and now he is "getting his bite out of the Big Apple," as the vaudevillians say when they are playing on Broadway.

NARCOTICS

A narcotic is a substance which makes you stupid, partly or completely unconscious, more or less insensitive to pain.

Some narcotics will make you entirely oblivious to what is going on; with others you may be semi-conscious, but have little sensitivity to pain, while with others you will have dreams, hallucinations and sometimes great mental distress.

A narcotic is very apt to discover your real nature and disposition. When one is drunk or narcotized he can usually be depended upon to speak the truth.

The effect of a narcotic includes (1) that which happens while you are taking it, (2) what happens while you are under its influence, (3) what happens after the influence of the narcotic is spent, when the body is trying to get rid of it.

The first effect of a narcotic is often agreeable; it may cause excitement, exhilaration, or calm and contentment, with oblivion of life's ills and miseries.

This is what makes narcotics so attractive to many. The opium user has it, and it often comes with the inhalation of ether or chloroform. Then follow stupidity and unconsciousness, with poisonous effects result and may prove fatal.

Finally, the chemistry of the body tries to get rid of the drug through the intestines, kidneys, lungs and skin. A gas or vapor narcotic like ether, chloroform or laughing gas is partly taken up by the blood vessels of the lungs, more or less changed, carried to the kidneys and passed out with the urine, the remainder being exhaled from the lungs with exhaled air.

A liquid narcotic like alcohol is eliminated chiefly by the lungs and kidneys, part of it stimulating the liver and being absorbed by it, and part being absorbed by other organs. A solid narcotic like opium undergoes various chemical changes, is absorbed by the blood and eliminated by the kidneys.

There are six classes of narcotic drugs which it is worth while to remember, typical representatives of these classes being: alcohol, opium, cocaine, Indian hemp, scopolamine and ether and all the last two being well recognized as habit-forming drugs.

Alcohol is the essential element in fermented and distilled liquors, and in many of the patent medicines. Alcohol is useful in preventing decomposition in animal and vegetable tissues but only five or six per cent is required for this purpose in most cases. The exact amount of alcohol in every patent medicine ought always to be printed on the label of the bottle.

Opium in some form is used in cough medicines, soothing syrups, and medicines for relieving pain, either in its gum or resinous form, or in the form of morphine, codeine, heroin, Dover's powder, laudanum, paregoric or some other derivative.

Cocaine is a very useful local anesthetic, but is often dangerous, even in small quantities, and other less dangerous substitutes are now in use, including eucain, stovain, novocain and others. The habit of using cocaine is easily acquired, larger and larger doses are constantly called for, and finally it makes the one who uses it a mental and nervous wreck.

Indian hemp from which hashish is obtained is much used in the Orient and produces a wild delirium, often inclining to the commission of crime.

Scopolamine, which is the same chemically as hyoscyne, is useful in surgical operations, and a few years ago was much exploited in obstetrical cases, producing the so-called "twilight sleep."

Either is most used as a general anesthetic, and belongs to the class of narcotics which volatilize at ordinary temperatures and are of great value in surgical work. It is not infrequently used for its intoxicating effects, and because it may produce serious results it should not be trifled with nor used by those who are unfamiliar with its possibilities.

TALKING TURKEY

"TURKEY GOBBLEERS"

We should be thankful at least once a year that we don't have to be thankful at any other time. Thanksgiving is the time to talk turkey and buy chicken. Families start off the day by being thankful that they are all together and end by being thankful they haven't had their collars ripped off.

"Turkey Day" sees a great many of the "gobblers" seated around the table. Some eat everything from soup to nuts and others eat the soup and nuts, too! What with prohibition, permanent waves and traffic problems, it's hard to find anything to be thankful for. When you give thanks it's hard to get a receipt. They say that there is always something to be thankful for even if you live with your mother-in-law. A 12-hour job not only upsets a mother-in-law, it offends her as well.

The last of the season's football games are played on Thanksgiving—and on the red. After that the winter sports have a chance to wear their fur collars!

The Pilgrims were the first persons to land in America on their feet. Now we get landed on by everyone! Anyone who took a look at the Mayflower, wouldn't wonder that the Pilgrims had Thanksgiving day.

The old-fashioned Thanksgiving brought all the family together, now the only thing that the drumsticks are used for is to play the traps. Some people are dieting, others are broke. The "carve" to the turkey is nothing compared to the carve to the chicken.

THE NO-WOMAN MAN

All women who came his way—He wanted none of them. Somewhere in the dim, distant past—in schooldays, a young thing had played havoc with his heart. Nevermore did he see good in her sex. Only listened to tales against, rather than for And he traveled much. Great stone walls surrounded his fortress—his home. And the sign above the gate said, "Ye who enter here leave all womankind behind." Here he tilted his land, and worked and played. And time crept on. And more and more he set himself against the "female of species." In a nearby village came a pestilence. And a call for help. Manlike, he stretched forth his helping hand Working night and day. He saw men of strength laid low, and children. But that over which he marvelled much Was the work of woman. No task too great—no hardship too severe—Standing the strain as no man can, Bearing and forbearing. And one among them Frail, and flowerlike. But with the strength of ten. Side by side with her He ministered unto the weak, the wan, and the weary. And when all was over, he returned home But to no purpose. For constantly before him Was the clasp of a sympathetic hand. The voice that reassured. For something came within That always comes to man—Since the world began. And no longer he hated, but loved. For he learned that her ministrations were no life satisfying. Without the touch of a woman's hand. An article by Sophie Irene Loeb appears in this newspaper daily.

Another engaging feature of this very wearable wrap is a narrow cape reaching just to the waistline. This note eases the lines without in any way adding width to the silhouette.

The dress underneath is equally straight in the matter of contour. It is heavy crepe in the same bottle green tone, with a close-fitting bodice and a short skirt full in the front only. Narrow bands of braid are used horizontally on the bodice.

Over a youthful frock of bottle green crepe, trimmed with matching braid, is worn a straight-line wrap with revers bordered in kollinsky.

MAKING MODERN MENUS

In spite of the many cakes which are sold in the shops and from the baker's wagons there is a surprising number of women who have their cakes baked in the home. Some of the cakes which enjoyed popularity two generations ago are coming back to take their place on the menu. The housekeeper has learned that a fresh cake, freshly frosted, is a most acceptable dessert when served by itself.

DELICIOUS ORANGE CAKE

Rub thoroughly to a cream 2 cups of sugar and 2 1/2 of a cup of butter, adding 3 eggs beaten separately. Squeeze the juice of 2 large oranges into a cup, adding enough water to fill it. Stir this into the mixture, together with 3 1/2 cups of flour, 2 even teaspoons of cream of tartar, 1 of soda and a little of the orange rind, grated. Bake in layer tins. For the filling use 1 egg, yolk and white. Grate a little of the orange rind into this and the juice of 1-2 orange, adding sugar enough to thicken.

CHOCOLATE MARBLE CAKE

MAY NAME INSPECTOR

MARION, O., Nov. 16.—A movement to establish the office of building inspector, empowered to enforce rigid rules relating to all classes of construction work, advocated for years by Marion officials and citizens, has been launched by city council.

Show boats are in for the biggest publicity they ever had as a result of the forthcoming picturization of Edna Ferber's highly successful novel "Show Boat." Names and addresses of all show boats in operation have been obtained by the producing company. Whether all the locations will be taken on one floating playhouse or on several, is not known, but either way the advertising to show boats in general will be far reaching.

Incidentally a large part of the public will learn for the first time that there are such things as show boats.

Le Perroquet de Paris, probably the costliest equipped night club ever opened in this country, made its debut last week in a blaze of splendor. Roger Wolfe Kahn, who is operating the club in association with Rene Rascover, acted as master of ceremonies in addition to leading his orchestra in its elaborate copper shell. The evening's show is to be elaborated upon. The innovation includes mirror table tops, which become transparent when lights are turned on in the table, revealing goldfish swimming around perfectly at home. The dance floor is of similar plan, with multi-colored lights, making it transparent at times and costing a reflection.

Anne Nichols gave a big luncheon last week at Hotel Ambassador, New York, to a group of about 100 well-known Broadwayites and members of the press. The affair was a toast to the 2,000th performance in New York of her "Abie's Irish Rose."

Owen Davis was elected president of the Authors' League of America at the annual meeting recently at the Town Hall Club, New York. He succeeds George Barr McCutcheon and is the fifth to hold the office.

Zeppo Marx may leave the Four Marx Brothers when the Chicago run of "The Cocoanuts" is finished. He plans to go into straight comedy. It is understood that Groucho, Harpo and Chico will enter the films in George Kaufman's "The Marx Brothers at Yale." The quartet was scheduled to appear in Dayton this winter in "The Cocoanuts."

were Tony Sarg, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Arthur Train, Joseph Hergesheimer, Rupert Hughes and Albert T. Reid.

BUENOS AIRES, O., Nov. 16.—Miss Della Gibson, aged sixty, suffered a broken hip, as she attempted to enter a waiting taxi that had conveyed her to the local hospital for an X-ray examination.

OFFICERS TO MEET
MARION, O., Nov. 16.—Judge Charles L. Justice, state president of the Elks, has invited all officers of the state association to meet in Marion, November 18.

EMORY PARNELL OF "1 MAN BAND" FAME COMING TO CENTRAL

"Versatile"—that should be the middle name of Emory Parnell, the "one-man band," who appears in Xenia Monday, November 29 to present a musical entertainment as the third number on the Central High School Lyceum Course.

Wherever Parnell has appeared he has been an outstanding "hit" and is generally conceded to be one of the best novelty attractions obtainable.

He transforms himself into the various characters he impersonates by use of wigs, grease paint and costumes—all applied before the eyes of his audience.

But the musical part of his entertainment is generally the best. He plays an accordion—plays classical and popular selections and uses it also as accompaniment to his vocal solos, at the same time playing the drums with his feet.

Mr. Parnell has a trained baritone voice and his songs are also said to be a striking feature of his program.

During his character-make-ups, he tells appropriate stories about the type of person he is delineating.

For more than a dozen years Mr. Parnell has been delighting audiences in every state in the Union, every province in Canada, Australia, New Zealand and Alaska.

FORMER XENIAN IS HURT IN ACCIDENT

Miss Frances King, Dayton, formerly of Xenia, is recovering from injuries she received in an automobile accident a week ago. She was in a machine with three other persons, returning to Dayton after a visit with Miss Frances Stroup, of Lynchburg. The parties were Russell Snyder, Mildred Anderson and another young man, name unknown, all of Dayton.

The accident occurred when the driver struck fresh gravel and applied the brakes, throwing the car into a deep culvert. None of the party was seriously hurt, but the machine was badly damaged. Miss King had the ligaments in her back torn.

Miss King is at the home of Miss Stroup, where she was taken after the accident. She has been placed in a plaster cast and cannot be moved for about three weeks. The accident occurred two miles from Lynchburg.

Miss King is employed at the Rike-Kumler Co., Dayton. When she is able to be moved she will be taken to Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton.

MUSICIANS APPEAR ON ROTARY PROGRAM

Musical artists from the Xenia Woman's Music Club entertained

Xenia Rotary Club, at the luncheon meeting, Elks' Club, Tuesday noon.

Vocal and piano solos, duets, and trios were given by Mrs. W. J. Cherry, Mrs. John M. Davidson, Mrs. Mary M. Meredith and Miss Juanita Rankin.

Dr. T. F. Myler, resident physician at the O. S. and S. O. Home and Pearl Cox, manager of the J. C. Penney store, were received into the club at the business meeting following luncheon.

GREENE COUNTIAN PICKED AS MASTER FARMER BY PAPER

O. A. Dobbins, near Cedarville, is named as one of "Ohio's First Master Farmers," in a list of twenty compiled by The Ohio Farmer, in the current issue. The article concerning the outstanding of farmers of the state includes the statement:

"Another hog breeder is O. A. Dobbins, of Greene County, who stands as one of Ohio's greatest breeders of Hampshire's. In one year he sold $16,000 worth of them all of his own raising. He has what we have termed the most beautiful farm home in Ohio paid for by the farm itself. He too is well known over Ohio as a speaker at farmers' institutes. Judges in the selection of Ohio's Master Farmers" were Dean Alfred Vivian, Ohio State University; Earle G. Reed, agricultural agent for Ohio, New York Central Lines; L. L. Rummell, The Ohio Farmer Staff.

TRANSFER OFFICER

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 16.—The Adjutant General's Department has announced the transfer of Colonel Willard O. Lathrop, of Cincinnati, commander of the 107th Cavalry, to the Ohio National Guard Reserve, and the appointment and assignment of Colonel Dudley J. Hard, of Cleveland, Chief of Staff, 37th Division, as his successor in command of the regiment.

MAYOR'S COURT

FOUR ARE FINED

On application of the principle so to speak, speedy justice was meted out to four motorists arrested over the week-end by Motorcyclist Policeman Peter Shagin for speeding.

C. C. Doone was fined $10 and costs by Mayor John W. Prugh for driving through the business section of the city at thirty-eight miles per hour; Dudley Myers forfeited $5 bond when he failed to appear for arraignment and Theodore Thompson and J. D. Kindboch were each assessed $3 fines.

What a Rexall One Cent Sale Is

It is a sale where you buy an item at the regular price, then another item of the same kind for one cent. As an illustration: The standard price of Klenzo Dental Creme is 50c, you buy a tube at this price and by paying 1 cent more, or 51 cents, you get two tubes. Every article in this sale is a high class standard piece of merchandise, just the same as is sold every day at the regular price.

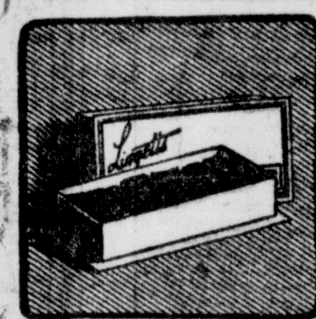

This sale was developed by the United Drug Co. as an advertising plan. Rather than spend large sums of money in other ways to convince you of the merit of these goods, they are spending it on this sale in permitting us to sell you a full size package of high standard merchandise for 1 cent. It costs money to get new customers, but the sacrifice in profit is justified, knowing the goods will please you.

CRIME SITUATION DISCUSSED HERE ON LECTURE PROGRAM

The first number on the Community Lecture course was given at the Presbyterian Church, Monday evening, with an address on "Long Shadows," by Dr. J. W. Claudy, Pittsburgh, who has made a study of the inside life of many prisons, having visited more than 150 jails and penitentiaries in the United States and England.

Speaking from the standpoint of the criminologist, Dr. Claudy analyzed the crime situation, pointing out the growth of "high crimes" over the past decades of our generation. He said: "The problem of crime today is mainly the number of crimes committed and the criminals never apprehended or punished, not the number who are sent to prisons. The prison receives a man after the home, the state and the church have failed to make a useful citizen out of him. The greatest cause of crime is the break down of the home." He referred to a recent book by a convict called "You Can't Win," by Jack Black, and quoted this sentence: "There is no substitute for the home and the mother."

Dr. Claudy took up the two main features of the treatment of criminals, "the treat them rough" and "treat them easy, sentimental" ways. "Treatment should be the measure of the personality of the criminal, his mental, moral and physical status. One third of all inmates, 500,000 in penal institutions in the United States, are mentally defective. I have no sympathy with the maudlin sentimentalities of some prison workers—criminals should have their just deserts—but at the same time given a chance to make good. The old saying, once a criminal always a criminal is not true, for many men have made good after a career of crime."

The speaker then took out of the pages of his experience and told in interesting word pictures, which gripped the audience, of the men with whom he had come in contact during his study of prison conditions. He said their only hope is useful occupation and some spiritual relationship. He told of a lifer in one prison who had become an influence for good and closed with the prayer he prayed for a fellow prisoner: "God take care of my buddy and give him a place where there will be no steel bars and gray shadows."

The address was well received by a fair audience and several joined in an open forum which lasted until 10 o'clock, on crime, criminals and their treatment.

WILLIAM JOHANNES SUDDENLY CALLED

William A. Johannes, 53, life-long resident of Greene County, passed away suddenly at his home four miles north of Trebeins about 12 o'clock Monday night. Death was due to angina pectoris.

Mr. Johannes was apparently enjoying the best of health and spent Monday hunting, returning late in the afternoon. In the evening he talked for a time and slept downstairs for an hour and a half before retiring.

It acts without assistance, tastes nice, and causes no inconvenience. Accept no substitute.

He died shortly after going to bed.

Mr. Johannes was born at the place where he died, August 9, 1873 and has always lived in that vicinity. He was a member of the Loyal Order of Moose in Xenia.

Surviving are three sons, Raymond, Ralph and Clarence, all at home. The following brothers and sisters also survive, Felix, Yellow Springs, Charles, Alpha, Frank, Middletown, George and Nora at home, and Mrs. Clara Ashbaugh, living in the same vicinity. One sister, Sophia, is dead. His wife preceded her husband in death by six years.

Brief funeral services will be held at the residence Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock and again at 2 o'clock at the Beavercreek Church. Interment will be made in the Beavercreek Cemetery.

CLINIC HEAD WILL ADDRESS KIWANIS

Dr. H. C. Messenger, physician in charge of the Kiwanis-Social Service League Baby Clinics, will address the club Tuesday night at the Elks' Club. Dr. Messenger's talk is expected to concern his work among children.

J. F. McLaughlin, Ernest Beatty, W. W. Galloway, Dr. Edward Kern, James Paulin and City Manager S. O. Hael compose the committee in charge of the meeting.

A Ki-Ro meeting will be held next week at the K. of P. Hall. It is announced, when the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs will join for a special program.

King Fuzzy-Paws

By GLEB BOTKIN

Tickleball and his father drove around just as though it were on a turn table, and instead of coming toward Tickleball and the king it whirled off in the other direction.

Strangest of all, instead of Fuzzy-Paws and Tickleball going in the direction of the wishing house they seemed to be going away from it just as fast as possible. The first thing they knew they had drawn up in front of a house which was in the shape of an ice cream cone. The horse stopped and Tickleball jumped out after his father. Immediately the horse went into the little barn, which was at the back of the house.

which seemed to have many streets leading away from it and looking for all the world like a big star. As they came up toward the center of this star they noticed another carriage similar to the one in which they were riding coming along at a great speed.

"It's Mousetail," cried Tickleball, and sure enough, there was that worthy animal riding in their direction. But when the carriage in which Mousetail was riding came to the very middle of the star it turn-

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1926
NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—One of the elevators in a New York department store is operated by a dour dingie across whose neck and chin the scars of razor slashes—cruel evidences of many a well-debated fray—abound with the propulsion of railroad tracks in the vicinity of a roundhouse.

On the wall of the elevator hangs a small framed card bearing the legend: "This car is operated by Friendly James. His watchword is courtesy."

The sad-eyed Greek proprietor of a Sixth Avenue lamb chop conservatory, whose business ability manifests itself in marked contrast to his culinary attainments, seeks to augment his clientele by angling to the world at large that he specializes in "Corned Beef and Cabbage, Jewish Style."

An Eighth Avenue hardware merchant who specializes in mouse traps has on sale thirty different steel, wood, wire and tin devices for snaring the diminutive rodents. I marvelled that so trivial a purpose as mouse catching should prompt ingenious manufacture of such wide range.

"That ain't nothin'," said the merchant. "You probly wouldn't believe me if I was to tell you that they've been 3,000 different kinds o' mouse traps paytented down in Washin'ton."

I quoted Emerson for him, about the mob finding its way through the woods to the door of the master maker of mouse traps.

"Evidently a great many persons have taken the old master seriously on that," I suggested.

"Who is this guy Emerson," asked the hardware man. "an exterminator?"

A New York woman recently returned from the Orient had an insurance inventory taken of some priceless curios she had picked up in her travels. The collection included two ancient Chinese statues fashioned of pure white jade.

The insurance appraiser bestowed a cursory glance on the twin pieces, gravely listing them as "Two glass Chinamen."

COMMUNITY CHEST PLANS MATURING; STARTS THIS MONTH

Plans are gradually maturing for Xenia first annual Community Chest drive November 29 and 30 and December 1.

Nine thousand dollars has been fixed as the minimum amount under which the Red Cross and Social Service League—the two agencies taking part in the campaign—can operate during the coming fiscal year.

The city has been divided into five parts and workers will conduct their solicitation in restricted areas to prevent overlapping and duplication of efforts.

Human task of raising $9,000 with only a three-day campaign but with the maximum amount of effort, C. S. Frazer, chairman of the executive committee, believes the goal can be reached within the time limit.

The auxiliary committee of the chest will probably hold a meeting soon to affect permanent organization and prepare all details for the drive.

POLICE LOOKING FOR "PEEPING TOM"

Toledo and its notorious "clubber" has nothing on Xenia. A "Peeping Tom" has made his appearance in Xenia if the many complaints to police can be given credence.

A man made his appearance in the city more than a week ago but was frightened away from one residence when the occupant twice fired at him with a revolver. Since then a number of reports have been made to police that a man has peeped in at windows. Police are searching for the man who is believed to be colored.

They are trying to make a new civilization in which none of the old animosities or hatreds will be present. Both Americans and Australians desire earnestly to keep free from entanglement in the Old World; they desire to carry on their great tasks of economic and social advancement, and there is between them a very binding link—the same attitude of mind, the same outlook on world problems."—Stanley Bruce, premier of Australia, in London.

GAME IS ABUNDANT HUNTERS HERE FIND

Optimistic hunters took to the wide open spaces and their quarry to the underbrush on the opening day of the rabbit season Monday, but nevertheless game was plentiful in Greene and adjacent counties, according to reports Tuesday.

Many braved the inclement weather in search of game and in spite of the climatic handicap a number bagged the limit in rabbits and shot the maximum number of pheasants.

No hunting casualties or mishaps were reported Monday.

These stories have not been heard locally but are not unlikely.

The hunter who is accidentally shot while cleaning his gun.

The hunter who is wounded when the gun trigger catches in a barb while climbing through a

SHE SMILED AT HIM BECAUSE SHE WAS THINKING OF JACK WALLACK

CHAPTER XIV

"You used to like to come here for lunch, Honey Lou," Margret reminded her.

A lunch there had always been regarded as a rare treat by both of the girls.

The food there was so different from anything that they had at home—the light, crusty bread, the highly-seasoned sauces, the thick black coffee in tiny eggshell cups.

"I still like it here," Honey Lou answered, her eyes sweeping the noisy, colorful crowd.

But there was a wistful look in her eyes. And the scarlet mouth that usually curved up like the wings of a flying bird drooped a little at the corners.

"All I meant was that this place isn't so—so elegant as Sabine's," she said. "Everything there is so rich and luxurious, like the inside of a jewel case."

"I know. I've been there," Margret broke in with sudden sharpness. "Steve and I have had tea there a half a dozen times. It's not nearly so interesting as this."

With a wave of her large, capable hand, she took in the room around them.

That lunch marked the first time that Margret saw signs of discontent in Honey Lou.

It was not like Honey Lou to be discontented.

She had always been so pleased with any small pleasures that came her way. So satisfied with the clothes that Mrs. Huntley copied for her from fashion books and shop windows. So sure that she and Margret were the luckiest girls, and had practically everything that the heart could wish for.

They had walked cheerfully to the movies the cold and rainy nights as well as on fine, moonlit ones.

They had enjoyed the street-car rides to and from work, with a good novel to read on the way.

They had gone window shopping every Saturday afternoon for ever so long, with almost as much zest as if they had had a hundred-dollar-bill to spend.

They went window shopping that afternoon, when they left the restaurant. It was the kind of warm day that makes a street blossom out with the first white dresses of the season much as a tree will burst into white blossom in the spring sunshine.

"We ought to be thinking of summer clothes," Honey Lou said as they stopped to look at some flowered organdies on sale in a white goods shop.

"But I suppose we'll have to make over the things we had last summer," she sighed, after a minute or two. "Jiminy! But I'd like to have everything new just once! New and crisp and hand-made."

Margret glanced at her. Her eyes were still shadowy with discontent.

"I'd like the kind of things that Angela Allen has," she went on. "The finest kind of satin and silk and lace. Anybody could be pretty with her clothes!"

"My stars! You're not worrying about your looks, are you, Honey Lou?" Margret asked, with a laugh.

"You'd be beautiful if you wore a burlap sack, with two holes cut in it for sleeves!"

Honey Lou was paying no attention to her.

She had stopped before the window of a small millinery shop—the kind that calls itself a "shoppe."

In it was the very hat that Angela Allen had once told her she ought to wear. A deep purple felt with a bunch of purple velvet violets caught on the brim.

"If it fits my head, I'm going to have it!" she said aloud with a kind of defiance, and pulled Margret into the shop.

It did fit. And not only did it fit, but it was enormously becoming. It did just what Angela had said it would do. It made Honey Lou's eyes the color of dark purplish brown pansies.

"How much is it?" Honey Lou asked the red-headed saleswoman who put it on her head.

"Twenty-seven fifty," she answered. "It was thirty-five."

"Twenty-seven fifty! Almost all of Honey Lou's salary for a week."

"If I buy it," she thought, "I can't pay my board this week, and I'll have to get along on two dollars and a half until next Saturday."

She took another longing look at herself in the mirror before her. Her flushed face was like a pink and white sweet pea under the flattering brim of that royal purple hat.

"I'll take it," she breathed, and tore open her pay envelope.

That night when Jack Wallack came to take her out for a drive and a late supper somewhere, she wore the hat.

He whistled when he saw her. "Wow! You look as if you'd arrived on the last boat from Paris!" he said. "But, do you know, I like you better in the little plain black clothes you usually wear. You're so pretty, Honey Lou, that you don't need gaudy things to set you off."

Almost the same thing that Margret had said!

"But what does either one of them know about decent clothes?" Honey Lou asked herself, as she and Jack went down stairs together. "Margret always looks like a frump, and Jack certainly is no tailor's dummy!"

On Monday afternoon Angela Allen drove down to the mills to take Honey Lou uptown for lunch.

"Oh, I can't go," Honey Lou said, when she came upstairs and stood beside her desk. "I owe you three or four parties now, and—"

She stopped. She was thinking that all she had was two dollars, in her shabby silk purse.

"If I hadn't bought that hat I'd have enough money to take Angela to lunch," she said to herself.

Then a wild thought came to her. Perhaps she could borrow the money from "One Armed Annie."

Ann was getting ready to go out for lunch herself. She was putting the cover on her typewriter when Honey Lou came up to her.

"Ann," she whispered, "could you lend me five smackers? I've got to take Miss Allen out for lunch?"

Ann looked at Angela, who was sitting on the edge of Honey Lou's desk, gazing down into the courtyard below.

"You goin' to take Hetty High-Hat to lunch, eh?" she asked. "Well, I must say you're stepping high these days, Ruby Rouge, you're stepping high!"

But she gave Honey Lou the money.

That was the beginning of the long friendship between Honey Lou and Angela. After that luncheon Angela came down to the mills two or three times a week.

Sometimes she drove Honey Lou home. More often they went to tea together at an expensive restaurant.

"I'm going out of town for the summer pretty soon," she told Honey Lou in that soft, satinsmooth voice of hers. "So I want to see as much of you as I can before I go."

The sight of her wonderful clothes, her silver bags, her rings and her pearls was before Honey Lou's eyes, day after day.

And it was only natural that Honey Lou should begin to have what she called a "yen" for some clothes like them.

She would stand at the door of her clothes-closet, and go dreadingly through the row of plain little frocks that hung there.

She would uncork her violet toilet water and sniff it, wishing that it was some of the heavy imported scent that Angela used on her dresses, her hair, her handkerchiefs, and even on the insteps of her stockings!

MEXICO DISPUTE MAY GO TO HAGUE STATE SEEKS TO SHOW PICTURES IN COURT

NATION WILL ABIDE BY DECISION REPLY TO STATES WILL SAY

Complaints On Land And Oil Laws Not To Cause Change

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 16.—The forthcoming reply of the Mexican government to the latest note from Washington regarding Mexico's petroleum and land laws will invite the United States to take its complaints, if any, regarding Mexican legislation to The Hague permanent court of international justice, it was learned today by International News Service.

The decision to invite the United States to go before The Hague tribunal was reached at a cabinet conference at Chapultepec castle on Sunday.

At this conference President Calles, former President Obregon, Foreign Minister Aaron Sazn and Gonzales Roas, who represented Mexico on the mixed claims commission, all agreed that, while it would be impossible to sponsor legislation at the latest of the American state department, Mexico, secure in the righteousness of her position, would offer to meet the United States before The Hague court, should the state department decide the American rights were insufficiently protected by Mexico's laws.

Mexico would pledge herself to regard a decision by The Hague court as final, it was said.

The Mexican reply, while couched in the same courteous terms as those employed by the state department's communications, will declare that Mexico insists upon her right to legislate on all international matters in accordance with her constitution. In this matter she finds herself unable to waive that right in deference to any foreign power.

The Mexican government will express cordial agreement with the state department's proposal for the publication of all diplomatic correspondence exchanged in reference to petroleum and land matters since last spring, when such previous correspondence was published. But Mexico City will stipulate that the forthcoming Mexican note be included in this proposal.

DENIES CLAIM IN ALIENATION SUIT

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 16.—Denial that an alleged described by attorneys for Merritt A. Clough in a petition for an alienation of affections suit here ever occurred was issued today by Mrs. Merritt A. Clough.

The petition drafted by Clough's lawyers detailed an alleged raid on an apartment occupied by John A. Stansbury, from whom Clough sought damages, in which it was said Mrs. Clough was found in a deshabille. Later the attorneys prepared an amended petition which was filed in superior court, charging that Stansbury alienated the affections of Mrs. Clough, but omitting all reference to the alleged raid. All the principals are socially prominent in Cleveland.

SUBPOENA STUDER IN LIQUOR PROBE

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 16.—A subpoena was issued today by United States District Attorney A. E. Bernstein for Carl Studer, formerly identified with an underworld group at Canton, Ohio, now serving a sentence in the state penitentiary for having conducted a house of ill fame.

Studer, it is understood, will be questioned by a grand jury which is to investigate alleged liquor and narcotic conspiracies at Canton. He was arrested and questioned several weeks ago when the investigation into the murder of Don R. Mellett, Canton publisher, was at its height.

EXPECT BRITISH STRIKE END SOON

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Acceptance by the miners of the government's peace proposals in the long coal strike was believed to be virtually assured today. The miners of Scotland, Northumberland, Yorkshire, Lancashire and South Wales voted for acceptance, a count of the ballots showed today.

The combined vote from these districts is large enough to determine the issue.

PRINCE OF WALES MAY WED SPANISH PRINCESS

Lady Rachel Cavendish

By A. M. STRAND
Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1926

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Is it true that the Prince of Wales is secretly engaged to the Infanta Beatrice, daughter of the King and Queen of Spain?

There has been no official announcement, but rumor is running wild and a certain mysteriousness in the atmosphere at Buckingham palace, together with the recent announcement that the Prince is to visit Spain once more has created an impression throughout Great Britain that some momentous event in connection with the beautiful Spanish girl and the

REPORT ANTITOXIN TO COMBAT CANCER GERM DISCOVERED

Medical Journal Gives Credit To Toxin Just Announced

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Definite classification of cancer as a specific infectious disease due to a germ which has been successfully isolated and the production of a combatting antitoxin which is reported to be giving direct results in clinical use in the United States and Canada became known today through the Canada Lancet, the announcement being made by Dr. T. J. Glover, of New York and Toronto, Canada, and his associates.

The announcement follows more than ten years' intensive research into the etiology of cancer and experiments involving the use of human beings and animals.

This cancer germ is defined as "Glover's micro-organism" and the antitoxin as "Glover's antitoxin" by eminent medical men who have been associated with the young Canadian scientist in this particular field.

The antitoxin is made from the blood of horses and is administered to cancer patients by injection. Official reports from cancer clinics which have been established in many places in the United States and Canada to test fairly the efficacy of the treatment indicate that the antitoxin has therapeutic value and that in many cases of cancer previously considered hopeless by physicians, all apparent symptoms of the disease have disappeared under the new treatment.

Hope for complete immunization of humanity from the disease is seen in Dr. Glover's statement that, "The future treatment may consist of prophylactic inoculations of a standardized toxin for all those who show cancer susceptibility."

Dr. Glover, formerly serologist and clinical pathologist to St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, began his experiment in Canada and came to this city about five years ago. He received financial support, largely contributed by John J. Murdoch, Larchmont, N. Y. It is stated that a vast amount of money has been expended in New York by Dr. Glover for his work. The Canada Lancet and Practitioner, recognized by the medical heir-apparent to the throne is about to happen.

In addition to the fact that the Prince lately spent some time at Biarritz, the King of Spain came to London with the queen, who was once the English Princess Ena of Battenberg, and though they both returned but a few weeks ago, the queen is again in England, staying at Kensington palace with her mother.

But so many rumors have been bruited abroad about the Prince of Wales' engagements that it is difficult to believe even this very logical one, with all its corroborative circumstantial evidence, until a formal declaration is made.

HAS HAD A REAL LOVE
Actually, he has probably had only one real love affair and that was with Lady Rachel Cavendish, the beautiful daughter of one of the oldest and most noble houses in Europe.

It is generally accepted in court circles that the prince was eager to make her his wife, and she too was in love with him. Undoubtedly the marriage would have been a popular one. But Lady Rachel's indomitable pride came between them, and in rather a peculiar fashion, there are certain formalities, exacted by the British constitution to ensure, if possible, an heir, and these, it is said, proved so distasteful to the consort-to-be that she declined the offer and gave up not only the man she loved, but a prospective crown!

But the projected union with the daughter of Queen Victoria Eugene (Ena), and who is also the great granddaughter of the old Queen Victoria, will be immensely popular both in England and in Spain, since the two countries are economically linked, English influence in Spain has been paramount since the peninsular campaigns and to this day a bargain in Spain is clinched with the phrase "On your English word!"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—A sharp conflict in congress over the treasury's proposal for settling American and German claims growing out of property seizures during the World war was forecast as the house ways and means committee continued hearings on the subject today.

The treasury's favored plan, as presented by Undersecretary Winston calls for an appropriation of $100,000,000 by congress to help American claimants whose property was seized by Germany. Ninety million dollars would come from reparations payments.

Representative John N. Garner, (D), Texas, ranking Democrat on the ways and means committee, declared the proposal meant that American taxpayers would be paying the debt of a foreign government.

He raised the question as to whether the United States was obligated in any way to return German property held by the alien property custodian and estimated by Winston to be worth $350,000,000 to $400,000,000. The American private claims total $190,000,000, and the government claims total $60,000,000, Winston said. The United States alone of the enemies of Germany has adopted a policy of returning alien property, Winston told the committee.

The step is necessary, he said, to establish as a part of international custom the sanctity of private property during the war. He advocated the policy on the ground of self interest, the United States

ROYAL INVASION OF CLEVELAND CAUSES BATTLE IN COUNCIL

Meantime Marie Is Enjoying Herself In Chicago

ABOARD QUEEN MARIE'S SPECIAL TRAIN (IN CHICAGO), Nov. 16.—Imbued with the hustling spirit of Chicago, Queen Marie of Roumania arose today at an unquenchable thirst for a swim in a local athletic club pool and then plunged into a strenuous program for the day, the last full day in the Windy City before starting for Indianapolis tomorrow.

While Queen Marie was receiving an honorary badge from Red Cross officials and visiting various welfare headquarters and museums, Princess Ileana and Prince Nicolas "did" the stockyards.

Since the royal invasion, there is no place in Chicago safe from high hats. The accompanying functionaries wore them through the steel mills in Gary, Ind., when her majesty visited. The "toppers" were present again today in the stockyards. The steers stoically awaiting slaughter blinked in amazement.

The zenith in the social program for Queen Marie will be reached tonight in her attendance at the Chicago Opera Company's performance of "Aida" as the guest of Ira Nelson Morris, Roumanian consul-general in Chicago. An exclusive supper will follow.

Her majesty denied specifically today reports from abroad that she had discussed or made arrangements for a Roumanian loan with American bankers.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 16.—Dimi D. Dimanecescu, Roumanian consul at Cleveland, will greet Queen Marie on her arrival here Monday but his greeting will be only that of a personal friend who has known the queen since his childhood.

The official welcome for the consulate will be extended by Ion C. Popovici, recently of the New York Roumanian consulate, who has come here to replace Dimanecescu.

The consul resigned his post in a rage after a hectic dispute with the local welcoming committee because, he charged, Roumanians were being ignored in the plans for a state dinner to the queen and because the city officials were using the queen's visit as a "political barbeque."

The fireworks over the queen's visit flared up again last night in city council meeting when Councilman Peter Witt, militant Democrat, insisted upon reading a letter protesting the celebration of the queen's arrival in Cleveland, sent by Hungarian citizens. The letter condemned the Roumanian government in vigorous terms and described in detail alleged atrocities which the Hungarians claimed were inflicted upon Hungarian women by Roumanian soldiers.

Mayor Marshall forbade Witt to read the letter and prevented the doctory councilman from carrying out his purpose only by submitting a sergeant-at-arms and threatening to throw Witt forcibly out of the council chamber.

Meanwhile, plans went merrily on for a formal reception, a state dinner and a special luncheon for women only, to be given in the queen's honor here.

Fourteenth chapter of this stirring novel of modern life appears in today's paper but a generous synopsis makes it possible to begin reading the story now and follow the interesting thread of the plot to its conclusion. Generous installments daily keep up interest in the novel which many readers say is the best these papers have ever published.

"HONEY LOU" STORY IN FOURTEENTH CHAPTER AS SONG NUMBER OF SAME NAME MAKES DEBUT

Yesterday in this newspaper "HONEY LOU," heroine of the story by the same name, written by Miss Beatrice Burton, found herself on friendly footing again with Jack Wallace, the man she loved and plied with him.

For the girl who had gone through the agony of fear that their love was cold, it was a delightful experience Monday night "HONEY LOU," this time reincarnated in a song, made her stage debut in a dress rehearsal of "The Bandbox Revue," local talent show which continues at the Opera House Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Miss Doris Whittington, soloist with the revue company, sang the

Simpson Wants To Introduce Movies In Hall-Mills Case—Surprise Witness Is Ace For Prosecution

COURT HOUSE, Somerville, N. J., Nov. 16.—Alexander Simpson, spectacular prosecutor in the Hall-Mills murder trial, today requested in court that he be allowed to project on a screen pictures of De Russsey's lane so that the jurors could obtain an accurate idea of the scene where the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills were shot to death on the night of September 14, 1922.

This unprecedented proposal from the prosecutor provoked a vigorous objection from the defense.

The opening of court was delayed this morning when Prosecutor Alexander Simpson went into conference with the presiding judges, Charles W. Parker and Frank L. Cleary. Simpson told the judges he wished to have time to question several new witnesses whom he had in an anteroom. These witnesses were members of the guild of St. John the Evangelist church in New Brunswick, who, Barbara Tough, the maid, had testified, had gossiped about Mrs. Mills and Dr. Hall.

Ira B. Nixon, 42-year-old oil salesman, today shares the spotlight with Mrs. Jane Gibson as the state's star witnesses. Nixon testified that Elisha K. Soper, a former friend, told him he saw Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her two brothers, Willie and Henry Stevens, sitting in a dimly-lit car near De Russsey's lane on the night of the murder four years ago of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and his choir singer, Mrs. Eleanor Mills.

Charges that American aviation is being neglected because it is being controlled by infantry generals and sea admirals.

The whole Mitchell controversy probably will be aired again on the floors of congress. If his friends have their way, it was recalled that Mitchell charged during his spectacular trial that Europe was outstripping American aviation. Although both departments denied the charge, the Italians won their rather easy victory, with a new type of plane, for which the Americans had no equal, thus showing that at least one European nation has surpassed the United States.

As a result of the results of the Schneider cup races, Senator Johnson announced he "hoped" congress would take steps to improve America's air defense.

The flying colonel's friends, rallying beside the preparedness advocates, undoubtedly will revive his fight for a separate department of aviation and renew his

INITIATIVE FAILS TO FUNCTION SAID

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Nov. 16 This community is wondering when an initiative project voted on at the election a year ago will "begin to start initiation."

The town had been engaged in a dispute over traffic lights on the National road. The village council removed the "traffic-delayers" and friends of the system petitioned for a vote on an initiative plank that would require the placing of these lights. The traffic lights were approved but only by a majority of eight votes. However, the majority failed to quail and the lights have not yet been placed.

Accordingly, residents are at a loss to try to determine how to get in initiative into action. The situation is unique it is claimed.

CANNERS MEET

COLUMBUS, Nov. 16.—Directors of the Ohio Canners Association, at a meeting here selected Columbus for the annual convention, which will be held December 7-8. Sessions will be held at the Fort Hayes Hotel. J. Warren Wood of Lebanon is president of the Association and Roy Irons of Clyde, secretary.

"HONEY LOU" STORY IN FOURTEENTH CHAPTER AS SONG NUMBER OF SAME NAME MAKES DEBUT

"HONEY LOU" in this paper daily is illustrated, and it was a picture of the beautiful heroine that inspired the song number. Whether you are reading the story or intend to begin it with today's issue, you will want to hear the song hit written by local girls sung by another Xenia girl at the Opera House Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Later on, by special arrangements with J. T. Hibbert, manager of the Bijou Theater, the song will be featured along with movies at that theater. Miss Rankin, who wrote the music, will give "HONEY LOU" on the organ as a special number and the words written by Miss Foley will be thrown on the screen with slides.

ERNEST MUSSETTER SUCGUMBS TUESDAY AT LOCAL HOSPITAL

Autoist Declares Youth Ran In Front of Car Monday

Ernest Mussetter, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Mussetter, Cincinnati Ave., died at McClellan Hospital, Tuesday morning at 10:20 o'clock, from injuries received when he was struck by an auto owned and driven by Otis Chaney, Stelton Road, near his home, Monday evening about 7:30 o'clock.

Chaney appeared at police headquarters after the accident and declared the accident was unavoidable, since the boy ran directly in the path of his machine, while playing. The machine passed over the lad, crushing his head. The brain substance was crushed and severe hemorrhages resulted in death.

Ernest, with several other companions, was playing near the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad crossing on Cincinnati Ave., when the boy suddenly ran directly in the path of the car, the driver said. He was rushed to the offices of Dr. W. H. Finley and later taken to the McClellan Hospital for an X-ray. The examination showed no skull fracture, but the brain was crushed.

Besides his parents, Ernest leaves three sisters and two brothers, Frances, Imogene, Ethel May, Frank and Lawrence.

Ernest was a pupil of the fourth grade, McKinley School. The fatality was the first caused by an auto accident in Xenia this year.

The body was removed to the home Tuesday morning, in charge of Funeral Director R. M. Neel. Funeral services will be held Friday morning at 10:30 at the home, 321 Cincinnati Ave., with interment in Woodland Cemetery.

CLEVELAND TO PAY HIGH MILK PRICE

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 16.—The highest prices in history—not excepting war-time quotations—will be paid for milk by Cleveland consumers beginning Friday, it was announced here today by J. W. Strong, general manager of the Ohio Farmers' Milk Association.

The announcement followed a meeting last night of directors of the association, at which it was decided to advance the price, which now is fifteen cents a quart, due to a shortage and inability of wholesalers to meet the demand.

"Farmers are not going in for dairying this year," Strong explained. "The weather throughout the fall was so rainy and unsettled that farmers were unable to build silos in which to store cattle feed."

INVESTIGATE MINE EXPLOSION DEATHS

MOONSVILLE, W. Va., Nov. 16.—An investigation was begun here today by R. H. Lambie, state mine chief, into the explosion at the First Street mine of the Glenale Coal Company here yesterday, which cost the lives of five miners and injured two others.

The work of rescuing the bodies was completed this morning when that of Thomas Robinson was brought to the surface.

Local officials declared today that they believed a spark from a wheel had ignited mine gas, causing the detonation.

KING FERDINAND IS ILL IS REPORTED

VIENNA, Nov. 16.—King Ferdinand of Roumania is suffering from acute stomach trouble, according to a bulletin issued by the French physician, Professor Bendaude, a Bucharest message today, which cost the lives of five miners and injured two others.

The work of rescuing the bodies was completed this morning when that of Thomas Robinson was brought to the surface.

Local officials declared today that they believed a spark from a wheel had ignited mine gas, causing the detonation.

DEFIANCE, O., Nov. 16.—Strict quarantines next year are predicted here by veterinarians and hog raisers as the result of the recent epidemic which inflicted more than $10,000 estimated damage in Defiance county alone.

For a time veterinarians could not get serum to immunize the animals and this made the condition serious for a time.

HER DAY of WORK and PLAY

by AMY ABBOTT

Making Dishwashing Easy.
Some women like to cook, others like to dust, and there are even those who don't complain about scrubbing, but we have yet to meet a person who doesn't thoroughly dislike washing the dishes. As winter comes on and the cooking dishes are more numerous and harder to wash, every woman is interested in how dishwashing may be made easier.

From the viewpoint of the house, hold expert, dishwashing is not a single process, but a series of movements which are known as "doing the dishes." The different motions which are generally to be gone through in dishwashing are: First, scraping waste from the dishes about to be washed. Second, stacking or arranging dishes on sink preparatory to washing. Third, actual washing with soap, water, cloth, or other cleanser. Fourth, washing with clear water. Fifth, drying dishes with towel. Sixth, putting them away in cupboard. The way to lessen the time and effort expended in this most commonplace of household tasks is to take the dishwashing step by step and simplify it.

For instance, beginning with the scraping process, a blunt wooden paddle or rubber scraper will thoroughly and noiselessly remove the food. In order to improve the stacking have a surface or table of sufficient size to the right of the sink and arrange dishes according to size and shape. They can then be easily picked up according to size and be washed faster. An excellent way in which to rinse dishes is to attach a bath hose or sprinkler to the hot-water faucet and spray the dishes as they stand upright in the drainer to the left. If this is done with clear sealding water there is really no need for wiping the dishes. This is particularly important as a time saver because it has been proven that it takes longer to wipe dishes than it does to wash them.

One of the most important things to remember in washing dishes is that a few moments soak in tepid water is often worth a great deal of actual scrubbing.

In the well-planned house the dishes may be laid directly from the drain to the storage shelves along the kitchen wall. To return to the actual washing, experiments with hand washing have proven that there is not much that can be done in the actual washing which will reduce time and effort. But in order to make the work more agreeable the sink basin should be high enough so that the worker never bends over, the sink basin itself should be deep enough to avoid splashing over, the temperature of the water should be hot enough to cut the grease, and a soap in solid form should never be used.

Unfortunately even the most improved mechanical dish washer cannot be recommended since our houses and plumbing are not adapted to the power dishwashing machine.

The Basis of Beauty.
It is not an easy thing to be a modern American Venus and the title is only maintained at the cost of much time and effort. Beauty must be more than skin deep, says Miss Mabel Lee, newly elected president of the national society of women directors of physical education in colleges and universities. The American Venus must train as constantly as a prize fighter, although not vigorously, says Miss Lee. She must develop an over-all beauty, and this grace and strength are acquired by doing specially designed exercises.

The Christmas Pudding.
England is busy making the traditional Christmas pudding. Some of our plum puddings come from England, and Francis Latty, chef of the Savoy restaurant in London, has already made 2,000 pounds of plum pudding for consumption in the United States.

"Mix your puddings several weeks in advance," is his advice to the woman who makes her own. Here is his recipe for a seven-pound English plum pudding:

Ingredients: Twelve ounces Malaga raisins, twelve ounces currants, twelve ounces suet, nine ounces flour, four ounces chopped apple, one ounce orange peel, eight ounces brown sugar, one-half pint milk, twelve ounces Smyrna raisins, twelve ounces crystallized peel, ten ounces bread crumbs, one ounce ginger, one ounce citron peel, one teaspoon salt, six eggs, one-fourth pint of brandy or sherry.

All the dry ingredients should be well mixed together. A little extra mixing well repays the trouble. Beat the eggs and add them to the milk, then pour over the dry ingredients, and again mix thoroughly. Pack into greased molds and boil for six hours at the time of making. The puddings should be boiled for a further six hours when wanted for use.

The best sauces, he says, are white, custard or brandy sauce.

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"
Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drug store. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875. —Adv.

TRAIN KILLS BOY

HAMILTON, O., Nov. 16.—Florian Belcher, 11, was dead here today from injuries received when he was said to have been struck and dragged by a C. I. and W. freight train near this city yesterday. The youth had been gathering hickory nuts and, according to a coroner's investigation, his foot became caught in a switch.

THIS WAS HORSE ON BUTLER

URBANA, Nov. 16.—Fuller Butler, clerk in a drug store here, is willing to take a man at his word after this.

A customer accosted him and asked for a remedy for his horse which contains alcohol and which in this age of prohibition, his said, is used as a drink by many. Butler suspected the customer didn't want it for his horse.

"Bring the horse in here and I'll give him a dose but I can't sell you the bottle," the clerk said.

Two minutes later when the customer tried to get the horse through the front door of the store, Butler got "cold feet" and admitted his error.

RABBIT HUNTERS IN ANNUAL EXODUS

Despite the outbreak of hog cholera in Greene County the number of hunting licenses issued by Clerk of Courts, Harvey Elam, when the rabbit season opened

November 15, showed an increase of eighteen over 1925.

Seemingly undisturbed by the epidemic, 350 nimrods took to the fields under trying weather conditions Monday armed with hunting licenses and high hopes for good luck.

The number of licenses disposed of so far is about the average. Statistics compiled by Mr. Elam show that by November 15, 350 licenses were issued this year, 332 in 1925, 372 in 1924, 392 in 1923 and 279 in 1922.

P. T. A. LUNCHEON

FOLLOWED BY MEETING

Through the capable forethought of Mrs. Charles Adair, president, members of Central High Parent-Teacher Association, eighty in number enjoyed luncheon at the Elks' Club, Monday and an interesting program later at the school. The pleasant luncheon was followed by a visit to the Opportunity School and an address by Miss Marjorie Gilbert, Dayton. Mrs. Adair was unable to attend the meeting and her place was filled by Mrs. E. P. Hamlin. Mrs. Charles Kinsey was program chairman.

Miss Gilbert is connected with the Dayton Branch of the Bureau of Special Education, Miami University and she confined her talk to the significance of Opportunity School work. She outlined the various "opportunities" of the backward child, pointing out the value of individual instruction, special teaching, class room material, free activity, individual expression and happiness in success. She said the backward pupils obtained a taste of success by being segregated from quicker pupils and showed more energy and contentment in their educational opportunities and instruction in making a livelihood. "Xenia should feel justly proud of its Opportunity School," she said.

Miss Alice Neff, of Central faculty, reported the state P. T. A. convention at Marietta, and brought home the message to observe February 17 as the "birth-day" of the P. T. A. organization, from 1897.

Mrs. Adair sent word to the organization, urging everyone to attend the Xenia-Wilmington football game Friday. Announcement was made of the district convention at Oakwood School, Dayton, January 21. Support of the organization in the union meeting of churches at Central High, next Sunday night at 7:15, when Dr. W. C. Klippinger, president of Oberlin College, will speak, was also urged.

Central P. T. A. now boasts 202 members.

DECLINE OF FATHER

One of those professional authorities on boyhood who, as a rule, have never had a son of their own, observes that fathers play "too darn much golf" and pay too little attention to their sons.

"Tis true, 'tis pity, and pity 'tis 'tis true," but 'tis greater pity that the warning comes a bit too late. If the situation were the outcome merely of parental indifference, there might be some hope of recalling fathers to their traditional duties. An appeal to natural affection might suffice. But indifference plays only a minor part in the estrangement of fathers and sons.

Fathers have been driven to "too darn much golf" and to too little attention to their progeny by a sense of futility. Little by little they have been crowded out of their place of influence and authority by the overreaching of "experts" and "organizations" which let it be known that they, better than fathers, know the needs of youth.

Fathers have found that their best intentions were all wrong. They can not keep pace with the fads and fancies in child psychology and child training. Boyhood is the training school for future fathers, but the modern father has discovered that since he was a boy everything relating to the upbringing of a boy has been changed, even the method of discipline and of teaching the three R's.

So fathers shrug their shoulders in bewilderment and, in resignation, slink off to the links.

WHAT OF THE FUTURE?

Is the day for the modern exposition gone? Have the people of the country tired of them to such an extent that they are seeking for other pleasures and other sights?

The fate which seems to have been visited on the Sesqui-centennial at Philadelphia would seem to indicate that such is the case.

An eastern writer, commenting on the failure of the Philadelphia exposition has this comment to make—not only concerning it but the fact as well that Chicago plans for one on a bigger scale than ever, in 1933:

The Philadelphia Sesqui-centennial Exposition has failed. People simply wouldn't go. There were, besides the midway, the numerous exhibits of modern industry, places and things closely woven with our fight for liberty as attractions. But the people did not go.

Is the sun setting on events of this kind? Are people bored with going miles and miles to see exhibits, and to walk on midways?

Chicago evidently doesn't believe so. A Chicago world's fair in 1933 will be greater in scale than anything ever attempted, according to the early ballyhoo from the Windy City.

The day of stupendous fairs may be past, but Chicago doesn't believe it.

POWER OF WILL

Doctors give "the will to live" as one of the strongest opponents of death.

When the mind accepts death as a foregone conclusion and surrenders, the fight against disease is almost hopelessly handicapped.

Lord Byron, in his youth, was told by a fortune-teller that he would die in his thirty-seventh year. The idea haunted him, and when he came ill after his thirty-seventh birthday anniversary he remembered the prophecy and, prompted by his superstitious belief in sooth-saying, said he was destined to die in that year. He died that year, but the conviction that his time to die had not yet arrived might have helped him get well.

A centenarian in an eastern town recently predicted that he would die on a certain day and at a certain hour. He died suddenly a half hour before the appointed hour. Doctors believe the strain of waiting for the end was too great for the aged man's heart and that he might have lived several years longer had his imagination not exposed his heart to the fatal trial.

Time and Tide

"OUR FRIEND LAZARUS"
Why is sleep called a mystery? Science teaches that the normal mind from the cradle to the grave is never absolutely at rest. Mysterious vibrations, lightning-like in rapidity, and called by men "thought," persist without cessation.

But because this tide seems more or less to vanish, in sleep, although bodily functions, such as the circulation of the blood, action of the heart and lungs, continue their unending work, there is a gap between voluntary and involuntary processes associated without waking and our dreamland life.

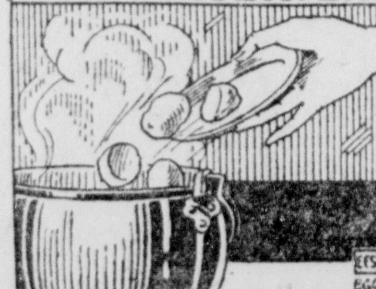

So much for the mystery of sleep. But that is only the beginning of the strange and puzzling story. The marvelous similarity between sleep and death has been commented upon by every human being since time began the unending legends of unnumbered centuries, back to the Dawn.

Do we, then, die each night, when we fall asleep? And if we do, then in what land do we linger, what unknown spaces do we cross?

"In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falls upon men, in slumbering upon the bed: Then he openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction."

OUR SHAME-FACED PURSUIT OF BEAUTY

A farmer was telling me yesterday of an amazing discovery he had just made.

"I have a chance to sell my hilltop with the second growth oak and maple for more'n I would have asked for the cleared land," he said, chuckling. "City man wants it. Says he knows he can't raise anything on it, but thinks it's pretty. Just imagine getting more for worthless land than for good."

He drove away, still laughing over the joke on the city man, totally unable to comprehend that beauty itself is valuable.

This old chap doubtless feels pride in being hard-headed and practical. Yet he hadn't been practical enough to see that his farm was valuable in proportion to its beauty.

He had worked like a slave to clear off woodland that would have brought him more money if let alone. What could be more practical than to know how to make more money by less work?

Evidently there is widespread acceptance of this fallacy that beauty is impractical. The truth is that beauty is the most practical thing with which we have to deal. Without it the world would not be fit to live in. Then nothing would be worth doing.

Many think that if beauty isn't wholly impractical, it is at least effeminate—something that concerns only women and children.

Even those men who have enough intelligence to appreciate the gay colors of a vase of flowers on one's desk are often half shame-faced about it.

Yet the craving for beauty does assert itself. A few men buy bright-hued neckties; others pursue beautiful but dumb girls.

A lecturer on art subjects gave a talk before a group of business men. At the close of the speech, a local banker buttonholed him and said:

"I agree with all that you say about beauty, but we're too busy here building industries to have time for beauty. We are practical men."

"Yet," the lecturer quietly told him, "you are secretly seeking beauty all the while. You think you haven't time for it and yet you want it. Anyhow, you want what you think is beauty. Otherwise, why did you dye your whiskers?"

How to Achieve Beauty

WELL-GROOMED FEET IMPORTANT TO BEAUTY

Present Prominence of the Foot

Another important reason, for foot attention just now, is the present prominence of the foot and leg with regard to the prevailing fashions, in which knee-length clothes are the order of the day.

Heretofore, when skirts were ankle length, the proportion of foot and leg prominence to that of the entire body was about one-eighth, whereas now it is about one-third, when one is standing and when sitting almost the same.

Hence, the importance of selecting shoes and hosiery that will look well and also feel well. And in this respect, I am not only interested in foot beauty but also in its effect on your face beauty. Sore feet hasten the advent of old age and cause premature grayness, and there is no doubt that corns can cause many wrinkles.

So let me caution you on the importance of selecting the right kind of shoes for your particular type of foot. If the natural shape of it is long and narrow, do not try to crowd it into a short stubby slipper, just because you happen to like a certain style that is designed along these lines. Or if you have a plump rounded foot, do not try to affect a style of slipper that is long and narrow. It will not only hurt you, because it is designed on a last that does not follow your foot's natural shape, but it will tend to make you look ridiculous, as it will throw your foot entirely out of harmony with your type.

After all, whether your foot is naturally large or small, you can make it look beautiful. The size of it is not of material importance, it is the symmetry and shapeliness that count. Select shoes that really fit and you will not only revel in foot comfort, but your foot's natural beauty will also be enhanced. The tall slender woman can indulge in freedom of choice, but the woman who is frankly heavy or the short plump woman should select shoes that will have a slenderizing effect on her ankles and legs.

If possible you should select your shoes where there is a shoe-fitting specialist in attendance. If your favorite shoe shop has one of the new X-ray machines which correctly display the outline of the foot and show how the bones lie, by all means use it. To be fitted properly to a shoe one must depend on accurate measurements and the feeling of comfort. The length of the shoe should allow the foot to lie naturally without cramping the toes. The great joint should come to where the sole has the most pronounced curve. The bend of the foot at the toes should come at the bend of the shoe. This is one of the most important points in fitting shoes. No seam of a shoe should come over the great toe joint. The toes of a shoe should be wide enough to allow the toes of the foot to spread when walking. The arch of the foot must be fitted snugly by the shank of the shoe at the instep.

A semi-annual visit to a foot specialist detects and obviates any abnormalities.

WITHIN INCOME

STEBENVILLE, O., Nov. 16.—Jefferson County is living within its income, thus complying with Ohio's new budget statute, according to Auditor E. B. Lockwood in announcing completion of the financial program for the coming year. The new law made it compulsory for auditors and clerks to certify that the necessary money was on hand or in sight before any expenditures could be made.

The DAYBOOK of a NEW YORKER

By BURTON RASCOE

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1925 NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Benson, the 12-year-old intellectual prodigy, who attained the highest quotient in official intelligence tests ever recorded in American educational annals, has the sort of courage of her convictions that would help a lot if it were more general in New York just now. A dreadful inertia has settled upon all of the reviewers for the literary supplements and weeklies, largely because, I think, of the present tendency to be kind, effeminate and innocuous.

Elizabeth has some of these pertinent things to say in "Vanity Fair."

"There seems to be a dearth of genius in America. There is much talent—for we have Fannie Hurst, Edna Ferber, Margaret Wilson, Carl Van Vechten, Theodore Dreiser, Sinclair Lewis, Leonard Cline, Ruth Suckow, Sherwood Anderson and innumerable others who are either tremendously in earnest and conscientious, bowed down under noble missions and fantastic realism, or bent on entertaining us with their pretty gifts of words and characterizations. But there seems to me to be no master among them all, unless it be James Branch Cabell, who is the lone wolf of American letters, the expatriate himself in his shelf of whimsical books, and creating a absurd, delightful, Freudian-free country of his own imagination."

"Ben Hecht can describe emotions and mental processes with more brevity and brilliance than any other American author, but he can conceive of few emotions and few mental processes not intimately connected with deduction."

"The Michael Arlen shelf of books, produced with amazing rapidity plainly betray a middle-class viewpoint, the viewpoint of the devoted sycophant of the fantastic world which he imagines exists on the other side of closed doors. Of course, I know nothing from personal experience of English society—Mr. Arlen's beloved Mayfair—but I have a hunch that the real lords and ladies are truly amazed at their portraits and wish they could talk only half as brilliantly as Mr. Arlen makes them converse on this cream-tinted, deckle-edge pages."

"The Babbitts of America are rather like the pathetic nouveaux riches of society. Babbitt knows because Mencken and Lewis and their kind have told him so that all he has considered cultural and worthwhile and beautiful is un-cultured, crude and ugly, but he does not know what constitutes good taste, culture and beauty or where he can find it. Maybe he once looked to New York as a Mecca for provincial Americans, but then along came Dos Passos' bitter and lengthy and incoherent Manhattan Transfer, proving New

It is a relief to learn that the brain of this brilliant 12-year-old girl was ever burdened with the insipid stuff that usually goes under the name of "children's books." At nine she had read all of Shakespeare, Dickens, Scott and Thackeray.

"Pewee Meyers, the Boy with the Educated Feet." I read on the bill in front of a vaudeville house, and I went in and waited for Pewee to appear, for I wanted to see if it was the same Pewee Myers, I knew fifteen years ago. It was. He came on and did a very expert and comical turn "in one." He was getting over big, in "big time." Hence this I-knew-him-when story.

Fifteen years ago or maybe longer, Pewee was a ragged little street gamin, who used to pick up a few pennies clogging for men around the fire station in Shawnee Okla. He got the name of Pewee because he was such a small little runt. A tall, homeless, shambling negro boy had taught Pewee how to dance and at street fairs and carnivals and on circus days when people are in a holiday mood and like to be free with their money, Pewee and the grinning, happy-go-lucky negro used to make quite a bit of money. They both could dance awfully well, but they held their casual audience largely because of the grotesque character of their partnership—the little white kid and the lanky negro.

Then something happened to the negro. Anyhow, he disappeared from Shawnee and then the fellow who ran the Palace moving picture show decided he would hire Pewee to come on and dance while they were changing reels. He got to be very popular in the town and later on he got some billings at Oklahoma City and now he is "getting his bite out of the Big Apple," as the vaudevillians say when they are playing on Broadway.

SIDELIGHTS

ON
Greene County History

HISTORY IS SILENT

As has been previously recorded, the first court held in Greene County was in a log cabin, occupied by Peter Borders for a tavern, situated near what is now Harbison's Station. The court was composed of Francis Dunlavey, president; William Maxwell, Benjamin Whitman and James Barrett, associate judges.

At the meeting of this court Peter Borders obtained license to keep tavern, as it was then called, but he meant to sell whiskey and did it in the same room where the court was held. Thus the first court room was the first whiskey saloon in Greene County.

History says this term of court was in session three days, showing that about all the business transacted was the licensing of Peter Borders, Archibald Lowry and Griffith Foote to keep tavern, the former paying $4 for the privilege. It is recalled that the court and the liquor got mixed up and that there was a general melee in which all hands participated in the old-fashioned way. This may explain why there were but three days' session, a point in which history is silent.

There were but two sessions of court held at Peter Borders' place. Afterward Xenia was made the county seat, having to contend for it with a little town called Pinkney, that had sprung up near the present site of Trebeins with the hope of being made the county seat. There is not one timber left upon another in this once pretentious little town. One historian saw it when there were some three or four buildings standing, although they were then roofless, windowless and, of course, tenantless, the lonely and decaying monument to disappointed ambition.

Keeping HEALTHY

by Dr. A. F. Currier

NARCOTICS

A narcotic is a substance which makes you stupid, partly or completely unconscious, more or less insensitive to pain.

Some narcotics will make you entirely oblivious to what is going on; with others you may be semi-conscious, but being well recognized as habit-forming drugs.

Alcohol is the essential element in fermented and distilled liquors, and in many of the patent medicines. Alcohol is useful in preventing decomposition in animal and vegetable tissues but only five or six per cent is required for this purpose in most cases. The exact amount of alcohol in every patent medicine ought always to be printed on the label of the bottle.

Opium in some form is used in cough medicines, soothing syrups, and medicines for relieving pain, either in its gum or resinous form, or in the form of morphine, codeine, heroin, liver's powder, laudanum, paregoric or some other derivative.

Cocaine is a very useful local anesthetic, but is often dangerous, even in small quantities, and other less dangerous substitutes are now in use, including eucain, stovain, novocain and others. The habit of using cocaine is easily acquired, larger and larger doses are constantly called for, and finally it makes the one who uses it a mental and nervous wreck.

Indian hemp from which hashish is obtained is much used in the Orient and produces a wild delirium, often leading to the commission of crime.

Scopolamine, which is the same chemically as hyoscyne, is useful in surgical operations, and a few years ago was much exploited in obstetrical cases, producing the so-called "twilight sleep."

Ether is most used as a general anesthetic, and belongs to the class of narcotics which volatilize at ordinary temperatures and are of great value in surgical work. It is not infrequently used for its intoxicating effects, and because it may produce serious results it should not be trifled with nor used by those who are unfamiliar with its possibilities.

TALKING TURKEY

"TURKEY GOBBLERS"

We should be thankful at least once a year that we don't have to be thankful at any other time. Thanksgiving is the time to talk turkey and buy chicken. Families start off the day by being thankful that they are all together and end by being thankful they haven't had their collars ripped off.

"Turkey Day" sees a great many of the "gobblers" seated around the table. Some eat everything from soup to nuts and others eat with prohibition, permanent waves and traffic problems, it's hard to find anything to be thankful for. When you give thanks it's hard to get a receipt. They say that there is always something to be thankful for even if you live with your mother-in-law. A 12-hour job not only upsets a mother-in-law, it offends her as well.

The last of the season's football games are played on Thanksgiving and on the red. After that the winter sports have a chance to wear their fur collars!

The Pilgrims were the first persons to land in America on their feet. Now we get landed on by everybody! Anyone who took a look at the Mayflower, wouldn't wonder that the Pilgrims had Thanksgiving day.

The old-fashioned Thanksgiving brought all the family together, now the only thing that the drumsticks are used for is to play the traps. Some people are dining, others are broke. The "carve" to the turkey is nothing compared to the carve to the chicken.

However, there are still several things to be happy over, most families only have one radio and fewer girls have the clippers used on their necks. People should thank for their own days for Thanksgiving and their own ways of celebrating. We aren't all thankful for the same thing, although sometimes two wives are thankful for one husband! The women should be celebrating their "wife, liberty and the pursuit of some other woman's happiness."

They should be thankful that they are free, but when a woman loses her chains she gets down and looks under the sofa for them. Holidays aren't what they used to be; we used to have snow on Thanksgiving, now things are wetter than ever. We may have a lot to be thankful over, but most of it's under water. People used to come down home for holidays, now they go out after them. If you must spend Thanksgiving in a restaurant, all your thankfulness is devoted to wondering about whether you'll live.

A lot of people who are getting their seats for the big games know that there's a Thanksgiving dinner, but they'd rather keep things stirring in the "bowl." It all depends on what you have as to what you should be thankful for, but almost everyone gives thanks for the wrong thing!

Thanksgiving makes the weekend last and a great many say it makes it weaker. When you sit down to the groaning "board" you may be hungry enough to eat "malls."

SOPHIE IRENE LOEB Says

THE NO-WOMAN MAN

All women who came his way

He wanted none of them.

Somewhere in the dim, distant past—in school days,

A young thing had played havoc with his heart,

Nevermore did he see good in her sex.

Only listened to tales against, rather than for

And he traveled much.

Great stone walls surrounded his fortress—his home.

And the sign above the gate said,

"Ye who enter here leave all womankind behind."

Here he tilled his land, and worked and played,

And time crept on.

And more and more he set himself against the "female of species."

In a nearby village came a pestilence,

And a call for help.

Manlike, he stretched forth his helping hand

Working night and day.

He saw men of strength laid low, and children.

But that over which he marvelled much

Was the work of woman.

No task too great—no hardship too severe—

Standing the strain as no man can,

Bearing and forbearing.

And one among them

Frail, and flowerlike.

But with the strength of ten.

Side by side with her

He ministered unto the weak, the wan, and the weary,

And when all was over, he returned home

But to no purpose.

For constantly before him

Was the clasp of a sympathetic hand,

The voice of strength laid low, and children.

For something came within

That always comes to man—

Since the world began.

And no longer he hated, but loved.

For he learned

There can be no life satisfying

Without the touch of a woman's hand.

 or Baugh
 Rakeoff or
 Mattox ..... Corzatt (C)

 Marshall (C) ..... Rose

Central High and Wilmington High, football foes of long standing, will reach the eighteenth milestone in their sixteen years of gridiron rivalry in the concluding game of the season for both teams Friday afternoon on the Quaker field. Game starts at 2:30 p. m.

Available records reveal that since 1911 Xenia and Wilmington have met on the gridiron seventeen times. Xenia has emerged the victor in seven contests, Wilmington in eight while two were tied. Xenia has scored a total of 195 points and Wilmington 245 and Central has not defeated the Quakers since 1921.

Following are the Xenia-Wilmington games since 1911:

1911—Xenia 16, Wilmington 3.
 1912—Xenia 25, Wilmington 0.
 Xenia 0, Wilmington 62.
 1913—No game.

1914—Xenia 6, Wilmington 0;
 Xenia 27, Wilmington 7.

1915—Xenia 20, Wilmington 21;
 1916—Xenia 0, Wilmington 20;
 Xenia 0, Wilmington 28.

1917—Xenia 6, Wilmington 33.
 1918—Xenia 29, Wilmington 0.

1919—No game.
 1920—Xenia 7, Wilmington 20;
 Xenia 7, Wilmington 7.

1921—Xenia 19, -Wilmington 0;
 Xenia 26, Wilmington 0.

1922—No game.
 1923—Xenia 0, Wilmington 31.

1924—Xenia 0, Wilmington 6.
 1925—Xenia 0, Wilmington 7.

1926—Xenia (7), Wilmington (?)

Wilmington, on the basis of a perfect record this season, may be made a slight favorite. The team has gone through the present season undefeated and with its goal line uncrossed, winning six games while a scoreless tie was played with Washington, C. H., a school Xenia defeated 7 to 0. The Quakers wound up the South-Central Ohio League in a tie with Washington for first place.

Wilmington's scoring record to date shows the team defeated Franklin 6 to 0, Chillicothe 27 to 0, Hillsboro 6 to 0, tied Washington C. H., beat Greenfield 13 to 0 and Circleville 20 to 9, scoring a total of eighty-nine points while holding opponents' scoreless.

The team is stocky and probably outweighs Xenia. In Telfair at left end Wilmington has a nearly perfect flank man. D. Davis at fullback is rated as one of the best line plungers in the school's history and it was this that had accomplished Xenia's defeat in 1925. Captain Corzatt at tackle has three years' experience. The team is coached by Johnny Nowald, product of Wilmington College.

If anything Xenia has a more impressive record this year than Wilmington despite the loss of two games. Central's chances of victory depend on its line and its aerial attack.

There is little doubt but that Xenia has a good line although light. Coach Kolb admits he has a good backfield. The combination of Gibney, Smith, Captain Marshall and Morton, he believes, could gain acres of ground against any team given half a chance and providing the line contributes its share.

"Bull dog" Smith is of the versatile type. He is a triple threat man, can pass, kick or run and besides being a good ground gainer himself is of great assistance as an interference and a handy man on the defense. He backs up the line well.

Captain Marshall is a better defensive man than last year and as for his plunging prowess, he is just as classy as ever. Morton is a streak of speed and since this is his second year of football, is playing more intelligently than ever. Gibney a cagey quarter, is light but fast and willing.

All these assets won't be worth a yesterday's transfer unless the line can withstand the repeated assaults of a much heavier eleven and a dry field will greatly increase Xenia's chances for victory. Nevertheless the squad is fit and hopeful.

CEDARVILLE LOSES TO BLUFFTON AFTER STIFF RESISTANCE

Life is not a path of roses for the crippled 1926 Cedarville College football eleven but it nevertheless put up stubborn resistance before going down to defeat before Bluffton College 16 to 2 in a well-played game at Cedarville Friday afternoon.

Bluffton marched down the field for its initial touchdown in the opening period and a field goal later in the period.

Cedarville escaped a shutout by pushing the visitors back in the second stanza until Bluffton player stepped out of bounds in the end zone to escape being tackled, automatically converting the safety into two points for Coach Borst's charges.

A sixty-yard run in the third quarter gave Bluffton its other touchdown.

Captain Brown, returning to his old position at tackle for the first time in three weeks, played the entire game with a broken right hand and despite the injury, played a remarkable defensive game.

Paul Orr, halfback, who sustained a fractured skull in the opening game of the season with St. Xavier at Cincinnati, was also back in uniform and offensively was better than ever.

Cedarville will close a somewhat disastrous season Thanksgiving Day, meeting the Wittenberg College Reserves at Springfield. Score by periods:

Cedarville ..... 0 2 0 0—2
 Bluffton ..... 10 0 6 0—16

BOWLING

Experiencing an off day on the alleys, the Fords yielded first place in the Xenia Bowling League to the Arcades by dropping the odd game in three to a much improved Buick quintet in a regular match Monday night. Donley and White, anchor men for their respective teams, contributed the major share of pins in their team's cause. Box score:

DIRECTOR CALLS FOR TALENT TO MEET

John T. Sutton, author of "The Terrible Demon" to be staged for Eagles Lodge, December 7, and 8, at City Hall Theater, is calling a meeting of anyone interested in taking part in the show, for Thursday night at 7 o'clock at the Eagles Hall, third floor.

The session will be short, and a large turnout is expected. Rehearsals for the show will begin Monday.

kolinsky. Narrow strips of this fur are also used to band the sleeves.

Another engaging feature of this very wearable wrap is a narrow cape reaching just to the waistline. This note eases the lines without in any way adding width to the silhouette.

The dress underneath is equally straight in the matter of contour. It is heavy crepe in the same bottle green tone, with a close-fitting bodice and a short skirt full in the front only. Narrow bands of braid are used horizontally on the bodice.

Over a youthful frock of bottle green crepe, trimmed with matching braid, is worn a straight-line wrap with revers bordered in kolinsky.

MAKING MODERN MENUS

In spite of the many cakes which are sold in the shops and from the baker's wagons there is a surprising number of women who have their cakes baked in the home. Some of the cakes which enjoyed popularity two generations ago are coming back to take their place on the menu. The housekeeper has learned that a fresh cake, freshly frosted, is a most acceptable dessert when served by itself.

DELICIOUS ORANGE CAKE

Rub thoroughly to a cream 2 cups of sugar and 2-3 of a cup of butter, adding 3 eggs beaten separately. Squeeze the juice of 3 large oranges into a cup, adding enough water to fill it. Stir this into the mixture, together with 3-4 cups of flour, 2 even teaspoons of cream of tartar, 1 of soda and a little of the orange rind, grated. Bake in layer tins. For the filling use 1 egg, yolk and white. Grate a little of the orange rind into this and the juice of 1-2 orange, adding sugar enough to thicken.

CHOCOLATE MARBLE CAKE

One heaping cup sugar, 1-3 cup butter, 1 egg, 1 small cup milk, 2 small cups flour, 1-2 teaspoons yeast powder. Take 1-2 of the mixture out into another dish and mix 1 cake of melted chocolate with it, flavor the light with vanilla put 1 spoonful of the light, then 1 of the dark, into the pan until used up. Frosting: One cup powdered sugar, 1-2 tablespoons milk, 12 teaspoon strawberry flavoring.

MAY NAME INSPECTOR

MARION, O., Nov. 16.—A movement to establish the office of building inspector, empowered to enforce rigid rules relating to all classes of construction work, advocated for years by Marion officials and citizens, has been launched by city council.

The Theatre

Show boats are in for the biggest publicity they ever had as a result of the forthcoming picturization of Edna Ferber's highly successful novel "Show Boat." Names and addresses of all show boats in operation have been obtained by the producing company. Whether all the locations will be taken on one floating playhouse or on several, is not known, but either way the advertising to show boats in general will be far reaching.

Incidentally a large part of the public will learn for the first time that there are such things as show boats.

Le Perroquet de Paris, probably the costliest equipped night club ever opened in this country, made its debut last week in a glaze of splendor. Roger Wolfe Kahn, who is operating the club in association with Rene Rascover, acted as master of ceremonies in addition to leading his orchestra in its elaborate copper shell. The evening's show is to be elaborated upon. The innovation includes mirror table tops, which become transparent

CHILDREN CRY FOR

Fletcher's CASTORIA

The Young Mother.

The ills of infants and children should be so well known to the youngest of mothers that a reminder or a repetition of the symptoms of illness seems unnecessary, yet there are some mothers who overlook a feverish condition, a little colic, or a disposition to be irritable. If not corrected they may lead to serious sickness. And to correct them, to bring Baby back to its happy self, is so easy by the use of Castoria—a medicine prepared just for infants and children. It will regulate the bowels (not force them), aid digestion and so bring quiet and rest.

Fletcher's Castoria has been doing this for over 30 years; regulating the stomach and bowels of infants and children. It has replaced the nauseating Castor Oil, so-called Soothing Syrups, poisonous Paregoric and other vicious concoctions in the homes of true and honest mothers—mothers who love their children.

Those mothers will give their babies foods and medicines especially prepared for infants and children.

To avoid imitations always look for the signature of Dr. H. H. Fletcher. Proven directions on each package. Physicians everywhere recommend it.

when lights are turned on in the table, revealing goldfish swimming around perfectly at home. The dance floor is of similar plan, with multi-colored lights, making it transparent at times and costing a reflection.

Anne Nichols gave a big luncheon last week at Hotel Ambassador, New York, to a group of about 100 well-known Broadwayites and members of the press. The affair was a toast to the 2,000th performance in New York of her "Able's Irish Rose."

Owen Davis was elected president of the Authors' League of America at the annual meeting recently at the Town Hall Club, New York. He succeeds George Barr McCutcheon and is the fifth to hold the office, but the first dramatist to be so honored. George Kelly, was another playwright to win out and was elected one of the vice-presidents. Others to be put into same office were Tony Sarg, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Arthur Train, Joseph Hergesheimer, Rupert Hughes and Albert T. Reid.

Zeppo Marx may leave the Four Marx Brothers when the Chicago run of "The Cocoanuts" is finished. He plans to go into straight comedy. It is understood that Groucho, Harpo and Chico will enter the films in George Kaufman's "The Marx Brothers at Yale." The quartet was scheduled to appear in Dayton this winter in "The Cocoanuts."

EMORY PARNELL OF "1 MAN BAND" FAME COMING TO CENTRAL

"Versatile"—that should be the middle name of Emory Parnell, the "one-man band," who appears in Xenia Monday, November 29 to present a musical entertainment as the third number on the Central High School Lyceum Course.

Wherever Parnell has appeared he has been an outstanding "hit" and is generally conceded to be one of the best novelty attractions obtainable.

He transforms himself into the various characters he impersonates by use of wigs, grease paint and costumes—all applied before the eyes of his audience.

But the musical part of his entertainment is generally the best. He plays an accordion—plays classical and popular selections and uses it also as accompaniment to his vocal solos, at the same time playing the drums with his feet.

Mr. Parnell has a trained baritone voice and his songs are also said to be a striking feature of his program.

During his character-makeup, he tells appropriate stories about the type of person he is delineating.

For more than a dozen years Mr. Parnell has been delighting audiences in every state in the Union, every province in Canada, Australia, New Zealand and Alaska.

FORMER XENIAN IS HURT IN ACCIDENT

Miss Frances King, Dayton, formerly of Xenia, is recovering from injuries she received in an automobile accident a week ago. She was in a machine with three other persons, returning to Dayton after a visit with Miss Frances Stroup, of Lynchburg. The parties were Russell Snyder, Mildred Anderson and another young man, name unknown, all of Dayton.

The accident occurred when the driver struck fresh gravel and applied the brakes, throwing the car into a deep culvert. None of the party was seriously hurt, but the machine was badly damaged. Miss King had the ligaments in her back torn.

Miss King is at the home of Miss Stroup, where she was taken after the accident. She has been placed in a plaster cast and cannot be moved for about three weeks. The accident occurred two miles from Lynchburg.

Miss King is employed at the Rike-Kumler Co., Dayton. When she is able to be moved she will be taken to Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton.

MUSICIANS APPEAR ON ROTARY PROGRAM

Musical artists from the Xenia Woman's Music Club entertained

Xenia Rotary Club, at the luncheon meeting, Elks' Club, Tuesday noon.

Vocal and piano solos, duets, and trios were given by Mrs. W. J. Cherry, Mrs. John M. Davidson, Mrs. Mary M. Meredith and Miss Juanita Rankin.

GREENE COUNTIAN PICKED AS MASTER FARMER BY PAPER

O. A. Dobbins, near Cedarville, is named as one of "Ohio's First Master Farmers," in a list of twenty compiled by The Ohio Farmer, in the current issue. The article concerning the outstanding of farmers of the state includes the statement:

"Another hog breeder is O. A. Dobbins, of Greene County, who stands as one of Ohio's greatest breeders of Hampshire's. In one year he sold $16,000 worth of them all of his own raising. He has what we have termed the most beautiful farm home in Ohio paid for by the farm itself. He too is well known over Ohio as a speaker at farmers' institutes. Judges in the selection of Ohio's Master Farmers" were Dean Alfred Vivian, Ohio State University; Earle G. Reed, agricultural agent for Ohio, New York Central Lines; L. L. Rummell, The Ohio Farmer Staff.

Why Have Gray Hair?

Don't think your hair need remain streaked with gray—or even very gray. For more than ten years, gray haired men and women, whose hair at one time was brunette, blonde, red, auburn, brown or black, have used Kolor-Bak with entire satisfaction, and are no longer gray.

Kolor-Bak is a clean, colorless liquid that has restored youthful appearance to hundreds of thousands. As easy to apply as water, it requires no experimenting with samples of your hair.

Just ask your dealer for Kolor-Bak. The one bottle is for all hair, no matter what shade or color. Results often appear in a week. And with the disappearance of the gray hair, the tonic properties of Kolor-Bak make it splendid to use for dandruff and falling hair. Its tremendous success is clearly shown by the sale of nearly 5,000,000 bottles, which proves its superiority.

Dealers everywhere sell Kolor-Bak with guarantee to return your money if it does not bring desired results. No excuse now for any woman to look old, or any man to be considered too old for employment. Your druggist, or any store where toilet goods are sold, carries Kolor-Bak. Ask for it today.

CRIME SITUATION DISCUSSED HERE ON LECTURE PROGRAM

The first number on the Community Lecture course was given at the Presbyterian Church, Monday evening, with an address on "Long Shadows," by Dr. J. W. Claudy, Pittsburgh, who has made a study of the inside life of many prisons, having visited more than 150 jails and penitentiaries in the United States and England.

Speaking from the standpoint of the criminologist, Dr. Claudy analyzed the crime situation, pointing out the growth of "high crimes" over the past few years. He said: "The problem of crime today is mainly the number of crimes committed and the criminals never apprehended or punished, not the number who are sent to prisons. The prison receives a man after the home, the state and the church have failed to make a useful citizen out of him. The greatest cause of crime is the breakdown of the home." He referred to a recent book by a convict called "You Can't Win," by Jack Black, and quoted this sentence: "There is no substitute for the home and the mother."

Dr. Claudy took up the two main features of the treatment of criminals, "the treat them rough" and "treat them easy, sentimental" ways. "Treatment should be the measure of the personality of the criminal, his mental, moral and physical status. One third of all inmates, 500,000 in penal institutions in the United States, are mentally defective. I have no sympathy with the maudlin sentimentalities of some prison workers—criminals should have their just deserts—but at the same time given a chance to make good. The old saying, once a criminal always a criminal is not true, for many men have made good after a career of crime."

The speaker then took out of the pages of his experience and told in interesting word pictures, which gripped the audience, of the men with whom he had come in contact during his study of prison conditions. He said their only hope is useful occupation and some spiritual relationship. He told of a lifer in one prison who had become an influence for good and closed with the prayer he prayed for a fellow prisoner: "God take care of my buddy and give him a place where there will be no steel bars and gray shadows."

The address was well received by a fair audience and several joined in an open forum which lasted until 10 o'clock, on crime, criminals and their treatment.

The next speaker will be Dr. R. H. Martin, ex-president of Geneva College, December 1, on "Undermining Foundations." The public is invited. There is no admission fee.

WILLIAM JOHANNES SUDDENLY CALLED

Mr. Johannes was apparently enjoying the best of health and spent Monday hunting, returning late in the afternoon. In the evening he talked for a time and slept down-

OPTOMETRISTS TO ATTEND GATHERING HERE WEDNESDAY

Optometrists from Greene, Champaign, Clark, Drake, Miami, Montgomery and Preble Counties, composing the district, will attend a dinner and meeting of members of Zone 9 of the Ohio State Optometric Association in the cafeteria and auditorium of Central High School Wednesday night, November 17.

Residents of Xenia and adjoining counties will also have an opportunity to see the film "Through Life's Windows," and hear an address by Dr. Clarence Kauffman, Cincinnati, one of the leading authorities in Ohio on care of the eye.

The session will be held in Jean B. Elwell Auditorium and will be open to the public. Special music will be given by the Masonic Quartette and high school orchestra under leadership of E. G. Whitworth.

The meeting will follow a banquet and session of members of Zone 9 in the cafeteria. The banquet will be attended by delegates from the seven counties that compose the zone and will be one of the most important of its kind ever held in this part of the state.

Civic officials of Xenia members of the city board of education, superintendent of city schools and principal of the high school will be guests at the public meeting and members of the Parent Teachers' Association, teachers and others have also been especially urged to attend.

Dr. S. C. Philbrook, Piqua, governor of the zone, will preside. Dr. Kauffman, who will be the principal speaker, is governor of Zone 8 and is familiar to many for his radio talks.

A motorcade has been arranged to leave Dayton at 5:30 Wednesday afternoon for the Xenia gathering.

Local arrangements for the meeting are in charge of Dr. L. A. Wagner, Xenia optometrist, chairman for Greene County, who is assisted by Dr. Fred Nelson, Jamestown, and Dr. C. E. Wilkin, Xenia. The closed banquet begins at 6:30 and the public meeting at 8:15.

THERE are 20 pictures of this beautiful lady printed on this page. TWO are just alike in every way and are the TWINS you are asked to find. No, it isn't as easy as it looks. Examine them carefully. AT FIRST glance all of the pictures look alike, but upon closer examination, you will see that almost everyone differs in some way from all the others. In some the difference may be in the bow or ribbon bands on the hat, or light or dark braid on the collar. Or, some may wear earrings, or necklaces, or both. Remember, only TWO are exactly alike. It is not as easy as it looks. Search carefully.

King Fuzzy-Paws

By GLEB BOTKIN

Tickettail and his father drove around just as though it were in the direction which had been pointed out to them by the animal on the roadway, and the steeper the hill became the faster they seemed to be going. "I wonder what has happened to Moustetail," said King Fuzzy-Paws to his little son. "Perhaps we shall meet him just as we meet one another," Tickettail answered, and as he spoke the road curved and there, far away in the distance, and glowing with a bright, nass that made the crown prince exclaim with joy, was the wishing house.

As the road came nearer and nearer to the little ruby house King Fuzzy-Paws noticed an intersection which seemed to have many streets leading away from it and looking for all the world like a big star. As they came up toward the center of this star they noticed another carriage similar to the one in which they were riding coming along at a great speed.

"It's Moustetail," cried Tickettail, and sure enough, there was that worthy animal riding in their direction. But when the carriage in which Moustetail was riding came to the very middle of the star it turned little in order to get into the little doorway and then he saw a room which seemed to be very much like his study in Animalia. On the top of the desk was a box which said:

"To be opened by King Fuzzy-Paws" and opening the lid, King Fuzzy-Paws put in his paw and brought out watches and jewels which he and Tickettail looked at with amazement. One watch in particular attracted their attention because on the back was engraved the likeness of the wishing house set with rubies.

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1926. NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—One of the elevators in a New York department store is operated by a dour dingee across whose neck and chin the scars of razor slashes—cruel evidences of many a well-debated fray—abound with the profusion of railroad tracks in the vicinity of a roundhouse.

On the wall of the elevator hangs a small, framed card bearing the legend: "This car is operated by Friendly James. His watchword is courtesy."

The sad-eyed Greek proprietor of a Sixth Avenue lamb chop conservatory, whose business ability manifests itself in marked contrast to his culinary attainments, seeks to augment his clientele by announcing to the world at large that he specializes in "Corned Beef and Cabbage, Jewish Style."

An Eighth Avenue hardware merchant who specializes in mouse traps has on sale thirty different steel, wood, wire and tin devices for snaring the diminutive rodents. I marveled that so trivial a purpose as mouse catching should prompt ingenious manufacture of such wide range.

"That ain't nothin'," said the merchant. "You probably wouldn't believe me if I was to tell you that they've been 3,000 different kinds of mouse traps patented down in Washin'ton."

I quoted Emerson for him, about the mob finding its way through the woods to the door of the master maker of mouse traps.

"Evidently a great many persons have taken the old master seriously on that," I suggested.

"Who is this guy Emerson," asked the hardware man, "an exterminator?"

A New York woman recently returned from the Orient had an insurance inventory taken of some priceless curios she had picked up in her travels. The collection included two ancient Chinese statues fashioned of pure white jade.

The insurance appraiser bestowed a cursory glance on the two pieces, gravely listing them as "Two glass Chinamen."

COMMUNITY CHEST PLANS MATURING; STARTS THIS MONTH

Plans are gradually maturing for Xmas first annual Community Chest drive November 29 and 30 and December 1.

Nine thousand dollars has been fixed as the minimum amount under which the Red Cross and Social Service League—the two agencies taking part in the campaign—can operate during the coming fiscal year.

The city has been divided into five parts and workers will conduct their solicitation in restricted areas to prevent overlapping and duplication of efforts.

Workers are facing the almost human task of raising $9,000 with only a three-day campaign but with the maximum amount of effort, C. S. Frazer, chairman of the executive committee, believes the goal can be reached within the time limit.

The auxiliary committee of the chest will probably hold a meeting soon to affect permanent organization and prepare all details for the drive.

SHE SMILED AT HIM BECAUSE SHE WAS THINKING OF JACK WALLACK

CHAPTER XIV

"You used to like to come here for lunch, Honey Lou," Margaret reminded her.

It was true. A lunch there had always been regarded as a rare treat by both of the girls.

The food there was so different from anything that they had at home—the light, crusty bread, the highly-seasoned sauces, the thick black coffee in tiny eggshell cups. "I still like it here," Honey Lou answered, her eyes sweeping the noisy, colorful crowd.

But there was a wistful look in her eyes. And the scarlet mouth that usually curved up like the wings of a flying bird drooped a little at the corners.

"All I meant was that this place isn't so—so elegant as Sabine's," she said. "Everything there is so rich and luxurious, like the inside of a jewel case."

"I know. I've been there," Margaret broke in with sudden sharpness. "Steve and I have had tea there a half a dozen times. It's not nearly so interesting as this. With a wave of her large, capable hand, she took in the room around them.

That lunch marked the first time that Margaret saw signs of discontent in Honey Lou.

It was not like Honey Lou to be discontented.

She had always been so pleased with any small pleasures that came her way. So satisfied with the clothes that Mrs. Huntley copied for her from fashion books and shop windows. So sure that she and Margaret were the luckiest girls, and had practically everything that the heart could wish for.

They had walked cheerfully to the movies on cold and rainy nights as well as on fine, moonlit ones.

They had enjoyed the street-car rides to and from work, with a good novel to read on the way.

They had gone "window shopping" every Saturday afternoon for ever so long, with almost as much zest as if they had had a hundred-dollar bill to spend.

They went window shopping that afternoon, when they left the restaurant. It was the kind of warm day that makes a street blossom out with the first white dresses of the season much as a tree will burst into white blossom in the spring sunshine.

"We ought to be thinking of summer clothes," Honey Lou said as they stopped to look at some flowered organdies on sale in a white goods shop.

"But I suppose we'll have to make over the things we had last summer," she sighed, after a minute or two. "Jimmy! But I'd like to have everything new just once. New and crisp and hand-made."

Margaret glanced at her. Her eyes were still shadowy with discontent.

"I'd like the kind of things that Angela Allen has," she went on. "The finest kind of satin and silk and lace. Anybody could be pretty with her clothes!"

"My stars! You're not worrying about your looks, are you, Honey Lou?" Margaret asked, with a laugh. "You'd be beautiful if you wore a burlap sack, with two holes cut in it for sleeves!"

Honey Lou was paying no attention to her.

She had stopped before the window of a small millinery shop—the kind that calls itself a "shoppe."

In it was the very hat that Angela Allen had once told her she ought to wear. A deep purple felt with a bunch of purple velvet violets caught on the brim.

"If it fits my head, I'm going to have it!" she said aloud with a kind of defiance, and pulled Margaret into the shop.

It did fit. And not only did it fit, but it was enormously becoming. It did just what Angela had said it would do. It made Honey Lou's eyes the color of dark purplish brown pansies.

"How much is it?" Honey Lou asked the red-headed saleswoman who put it on her head.

"Twenty-seven fifty," she answered. "It was thirty-five."

Twenty-seven fifty! Almost all of Honey Lou's salary for a week. "If I buy it," she thought, "I can't pay my board this week, and I'll have to get along on two dollars and a half until next Saturday."

She took another longing look at herself in the mirror before her. Her flushed face was like a pink and white sweet pea under the flattering brim of that royal purple hat.

"I'll take it," she breathed, and tore open her pay envelope.

That night when Jack Wallack came to take her out for a drive and a late supper somewhere, she wore the hat.

He whistled when he saw her. "Whew! You look as if you'd arrived on the last boat from Paris!" he said. "But, do you know, I like you better in the little plain black clothes you usually wear. You're so pretty, Honey Lou, that you don't need gaudy things to set you off."

Almost the same thing that Margaret had said!

"But what does either one of them know about decent clothes?" Honey Lou asked herself, as she and Jack went down stairs to supper. "Margaret always looks like a frump, and Jack certainly is no tailor's dummy!"

On Monday afternoon Angela Allen drove down to the mill to take Honey Lou uptown for lunch.

"Oh, I can't go," Honey Lou said, when she came upstairs and stood beside her desk. "I owe you three or four parties now, and—"

She stopped. She was thinking that all she had was two dollars, in her shabby silk purse.

"If I hadn't bought that hat I'd have enough money to take Angela to lunch," she said to herself.

Then a wild thought came to her. Perhaps she could borrow the money from "One Armed Annie."

Ann was getting ready to go out for lunch herself. She was putting the cover on her typewriter when Honey Lou came up to her.

"Ann," she whispered, "could you lend me five smackers? I've got to take Miss Allen out for lunch."

Ann looked at Angela, who was sitting on the edge of Honey Lou's desk, gazing down into the courtyard below.

"You got to take Hetty High-Hat to lunch, eh?" she asked. "Well, I must say you're stepping high these days, Ruby Rouge, you're stepping high!"

But she gave Honey Lou the money.

That was the beginning of the long friendship between Honey Lou and Angela. After that luncheon Angela came down to the mill two or three times a week.

Sometimes she drove Honey Lou home. More often they went to tea together at an expensive restaurant.

"I'm going out of town for the summer pretty soon," she told Honey Lou in that soft, satinsmooth voice of hers. "So I want to see as much of you as I can before I go."

The sight of her wonderful clothes, her silver bags, her rings and her pearls was before Honey Lou's eyes, day after day.

And it was only natural that Honey Lou should begin to have what she called a "yen" for some clothes like them.

She would stand at the door of her clothes-closet, and go dreadingly through the row of plain little frocks that hung there.

She would uncork her violet toilet water and sniff it, wishing that it was some of the heavy imported scent that Angela used on her dresses, her hair, her handkerchiefs, and even on the insteps of her stockings!

Easy to check Catarrh NOW!

Many endure catarrh because they do not know how easy it is to end it. Salves and ointments give only temporary relief. Catarrh is too deep-seated for them to reach effectively.

To end catarrh you must treat the inflamed mucous membranes—the delicate linings of nose, throat and head. When these are again in a healthy condition, catarrh, and catarrhal deafness disappear.

To do this use Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Thousands have found it most effective for over 40 years. Ask your druggist. Price 85c. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.
